Lawmakers Can't See Reagan As President

SACRAMENTO (AP) — California legislators give Gov. Ronald Reagan a mixed rating as governor — ranging from poor to good — but most say he isn't qualified to be president.

An Associated Press poll of the lawmakers also showed today that a majority of those responding believe Reagan will become an active candidate for the Republican presidential nomination this year.

"He is now!" said one Republican assemblyman.

In an attempt to get a frank appraisal from the legislators, they were told they would not be quoted by name on questions dealing with their assessments of the governor. The replies generally followed party lines, but not always.

Of 50 senators and assemblymen replying, out of 120 lawmakers, 17 said Reagan was a good governor, 17 assessed him as fair, and 16 poor. All 16 who gave Reagan a low rating were Democrats, and only one Democrat said Reagan was a good governor during his first full year in office.

Eleven Democrats and six Republicans listed his performance as fair.

"Fair and improving," commented one Republican.

"Fair, but I expect he will greatly improve in 1968," wrote another.

Thirty-eight lawmakers said Reagan isn't qualified to be president. This included 25 Democrats and 13 Republicans. Only one Democrat said he was qualified.

Twenty-three Democrats and 10 Republicans are convinced Reagan will seek the presidency this year although he contends now, "I am not a candidate."

Two Democrats and 12 Republicans didn't think he would make a bid for the White House.

One Democratic assemblyman qualified his "no" by saying Reagan might if "there is a deadlock at the Republican convention between the Nixon and anti-Nixon forces."

"Yes, I hope so," a Republican replied.

A Republican senator said, "If a bona fide draft develops I think he will accept, but I don't think he will campaign for the nomination."

The lawmakers gave Reagan only a fair rating in his general relations with the legislature. Seven said he was good in this respect, 27 said fair, and 13 poor.

Reagan fared better, in the legislators' view, in his ability to get programs through the Senate and Assembly: Good 17, fair 28 and poor 6.

In his year-end news conference, Reagan was asked if he thought legislative votes were affected because lawmakers thought some of Reagan's proposals were designed to further presidential ambitions.

"No," Reagan replied. "I don't believe so, because frankly I don't think anyone upstairs believes in that idea of presidential ambitions. They know better, but it is a pretty handy thing to say politically. I just plain don't believe it."

Tehama County Accuses Greenbrae Man Of Bribe Try

Developer Terms Warrant 'Rubbish,' Raps 'Clique'

The district attorney of Tehama County today charged a Greenbrae developer with attempting to bribe three Tehama County supervisors to push through a summer vacation housing development in the county.

The Greenbrae man, David Green, 55, of 70 Corte Dorado, was released on $30,000 bail early today after being booked into the Marin County Jail on a warrant from Tehama County charging him with attempted bribery of public officials.

"It's a lot of rot, a lot of rubbish," said Green, who identified himself as a "retired apartment house upgrader."

He said he sold 2,000 acres of his Tehama property to a San Jose company, Recreation Properties, and had interested himself in the successful completion of the project because "it would help the people in Red Bluff."

'PEOPLE DESPERATE'

Green said: The people up there are desperate and unemployed. All this petty stuff has been going on. There is a nasty little political clique up there."

Dist. Atty. Robert W. Trimble of Tehama County said Green left an envelope containing $1,000 with the wife of one member of the Tehama Board of Supervisors, Dale Pickell, of Red Bluff, and his bribe offers were rejected by two other supervisors, Raymond Snelson of Red Bluff, and George Hoag of Corning.

NEW PLANNERS?

Trimble said Green wanted the supervisors to appoint four new members to the Tehema County Planning Commission and to see to it that the county's road standards were lowered so the developers would not have to put all-weather mountain roads into the property where the summer homes were to be built.

Trimble said the bribe attempts were made last Thursday. He said the terms of four members of the Planning Commission expired during the week. They are Mrs. Lula Turner, Lynn Raymond, Leroy

Auditorium May Go To Third Bid

Marin County may have to accept the third lowest bid for the Veterans Memorial Auditorium, because the two lowest offers made last month contained errors that appear to be bona fide.

County Counsel Douglas J. Maloney made this disclosure yesterday in a letter to the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

Bids opened on Dec. 12 showed Wright and Oretsky of Santa Rosa to be the third lowest bidder, at $1,894,300. This is still well below the architect's estimate of $1,980,000. Low bidder was C. Overaa and Co. of Richmond, at $1,738,269. Second low was Williams and Burrows of Belmont at $1,835,778.

Both Overaa and Williams & Burrows can provide convincing proof of bona fide errors in preparing their bids, said Maloney.

County supervisors will decide Tuesday morning whether the Wright & Oretsky bid will be accepted.

Death Row's Inmates Still Going Hungry

Twenty-five of the 63 inmates on San Quentin Prison's death row today continued a hunger strike into its second day.

Capt. Calvin B. McEndree, officer of the day, said no other inmates joined the strike, but none of the 25 men who started it accepted food today.

This morning's breakfast which the men refused consisted of stewed raisins, rolled oats, fried eggs, grilled sausage, coffee cake, toast, bread, jam, oleomargarine, coffee and milk, Captain McEndree reported.

Last night's menu included spaghetti soup, cole slaw with sour cream dressing, fish patties, tartar sauce, barbecued short ribs, fried potatoes, creamed cauliflower and red beans.

Several days ago, the men presented prison officials with a petition complaining of the food, its preparation and serving.

Two of their demands have been met, McEndree said. One complaint was that the food was not hot enough. The temperature of the water in the steam table in which the food is taken to death row has been raised, McEndree said.

The prison has supplied the inmate who serves the food with a clean apron. The death row inmates had complained that he served the food in the same clothes in which he worked.

Other complaints of the death row inmates included:

The meat and rice in the cab-

San Francisco Newspaperless

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — San Francisco was without regular editions of its two major dailies today as the echo of a strike in Los Angeles burgeoned into a strike against the joint facilities of the independent morning Chronicle and the Hearst afternoon Examiner.

The shutdown began yesterday morning when workers refused to cross a picket line set up by strikers from Hearst's Los Angeles Herald-Examiner.

The Herald-Examiner has continued to publish since it was struck Dec. 15 by the American Newspaper Guild in a contract dispute. The Machinists Union joined in the Guild strike, and seven other unions say they are locked out.

Yesterday, 14 Los Angeles pickets from the Guild and five other unions appeared here at the entrances of the recently combined publishing facilities of the Chronicle and Examiner. Both are edited and printed in the Chronicle building at 5th and Mission streets. Separate news staffs edit the two papers, but both are printed on the President Is Hanged In Effigy

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) —About 300 university students hanged President Johnson in effigy today and chanted anti-American slogans while waiting for Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey to come and talk to them.

The students carried dozens of signs assailing the U.S. role in Vietnam, such as "Americans hands are red with the blood of Vietnamese children."

Humphrey, delayed by a two-hour meeting with Emperor Haile Selassie, canceled plans to address the students. This caused one student leader to say: "We are very disappointed the vice president is not coming. We just wanted him to know how we felt."

Humphrey went to the audience with the emperor after a major address in which he said President Johnson's administration refused to retreat before the "new isolationism" caused by congressional cuts in U.S. foreign aid.

The vice president said the administration will take its case for more foreign aid directly to the American people.

Humphrey's speech was presented to a joint meeting of the Organization of African Unity and the U.N. Economic Commission for Africa.

More than 500 delegates and officials from virtually every independent African country except those ruled by white minorities were on hand for the meeting.

Humphrey also reiterated the United States' condemnation of minority rule.

Crackdown Begins On Draft Protests

Dr. Spock Among Five Indicted

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Johnson Administration's drive against adult leaders of the draft resistance movement apparently is aimed at dampening the fervor and upping the cost of what it believes to be an illicit antiwar protest.

The indictments returned yesterday against five prominent antiwar protesters on charges of urging or aiding young men to evade the draft are only the start, according to officials.

The investigation that produced those indictments is continuing, they said, and additional indictments can be expected.

WHO NEXT?

Officials would not identify the persons or groups that might be faced with charges similar to those leveled against Dr. Benjamin M. Spock, the Rev. William Sloane Coffin Jr., Mitchell Goodman, Marcus Raskin and Michael Ferber.

But they would not rule out the possibility that such Black Power militants as Stokely Carmichael and H. Rap Brown may face similar action. Brown and Carmichael have publicly urged Negroes to evade the draft on numerous occasions in the past.

ACTIONS INVOLVED

What appeared to separate those indicted yesterday from Carmichael and Brown is that Spock, Coffin and the others allegedly combined their speeches with the physical act of picking up draft cards which, by law, registrants must carry.

Thus they, in effect, wedded advocacy with action—the legal test that must be met before charges can be brought, in the view of Justice Department lawyers.

Department officials have said frequently that the speeches of Carmichael and Brown are just that, speeches, and have not yet been linked with action.

Officials here insisted that the move to indict Spock and the others had not been cleared with President Johnson.

But the victory that the indictments meant for Draft Director Lewis B. Hershey — and his characterization of the Red Trap Mauls U.S. Company

SAIGON (UPI)—Communist troops today killed, wounded or captured all but 14 GIs of a 103-man American army company ambushed on the northern coast.

"There was not one man who did not show he was an American. There are no draft card burners in this crew. They stood and fought," said Col. Louis Gelling, of the 196th Light Infantry Brigade.

Outnumbered three to one, caught in a U-shaped trap, the U.S. infantrymen battled through the night and past dawn before North Vietnamese troops broke off the fight that left 16 Americans dead, 56 wounded and seven listed as missing, battlefield reports said.

In other war developments, thousands of Communist troops today stormed into five South Vietnamese villages and posts and in a reign of terror killed 14 civilians, wounded at least 196 and destroyed or damaged 200 houses. In the air war, U.S. spokesmen reported the loss of four jets during yesterday's 104-mission aerial assault against North Vietnam, with the bombers destroying the key Lang Son Bridge only 10 miles from the Red China border.

The downings boosted past the 1,000 mark the number of U.S. planes lost in the war in combat. U.S. spokesmen said 783 have been lost in North Vietnam and 120 shot down in South Vietnam—a total of 1,003.

Only two Communist bodies were found at the ambush scene, reported UPI photographer William Hall. They lay near the wreckage of an American

DIRKSEN'S COLUMN

Retirement Fund Is Facing Bankruptcy

(The Independent-Journal today introduces a new column to appear each Saturday by Everett M. Dirksen, GOP leader in the Senate. The column in ensuing weeks will appear on the editorial page.)

By EVERETT McKINLEY DIRKSEN

When you finish reading this column you may suspect why some of us in Congress could be worried about the future of Social Security.

Sometimes you can gain a clear picture of a very complicated big thing — such as Social Security and its many millions of beneficiaries, present and future — if you can understand a somewhat similar thing, such as the Civil Service Retirement Fund.

I ask a question: Do the more than 3 million people who have retired, or who expect to retire, from civilian employment in the government know that their Civil Service Retirement Fund is in jeopardy and that it could be bankrupt within 20 years?

When you regularly pay the premiums on an insurance policy, you may properly and confidently expect that, when the policy matures, the money due you or your beneficiary is ready and waiting for payment in the insurance company's trust fund or reserve.

If the examiners discovered that the fund was unsound and would not pay out, the state insurance commissioner would very promptly call the company on the carpet. If there was negligence, wrongdoing or some other reason to indicate blame and culpability on the part of the insurance company, the insurance commissioner would take swift action against it.

But when an agency of the United States government takes money every month from 3 million federal civilian employees to assure them a retirement pension, and then finds itself headed toward the road to bankruptcy, apparently nobody is called upon for an accounting.

How come? you say.

In 1920 Congress enacted a Civil Service Retirement System. Under the system, all

Nicasio Cools To 14 Degrees

The temperature dropped to 14 degrees early today in Nicasio as Marin shivered for the fourth straight morning in frosty weather.

Frost was so thick on the Nicasio hillsides that it resembled a snow covering.

Fog closed the Marin County Airport at Novato and the flight line at Hamilton Air Force Base to visual flying throughout the morning.

The Weather Bureau forecast continued low temperatures for the next two days.

Low temperatures around the county included 23 in Bolinas, 24 in Novato, 27 in Woodacre, 32 in Sausalito, San Anselmo and Fairfax, 33 in San Rafael, and 36 in Tamalpais Valley.

MISSING from school in San Francisco yesterday was one daughter of heiress Mrs. Newton (Dolly Fritz) Cope, Isabel MacMasters, 4 (right). Police Seek Father In New Dolly Kidnap

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Police are looking for Donald MacMasters, ex-husband of socialite Dolly Fritz MacMasters Cope, in connection with the abduction of his 4-year-old daughter from an exclusive San Francisco school.

Missing is Isabelle MacMasters, who was visiting the Sarah Dix Hamlin School for the day with her older sister Marguerite, 5, Friday when a man broke into the classroom and tore the child from the arms of the kindergarten teacher.

The teacher, Mrs. Virginia MacLean said she tried to wrestle the child away from him but was thrown to the ground by the man who ran to a waiting car and drove away.

The children's stepfather said Marguerite told him: "It was daddy."

MacMasters, occasional Paris antique dealer who has become a British citizen, abducted the girls a year ago and took them to Mexico. They were recovered a month later.

Mrs. Cope, 37, is the well-known San Francisco heiress who owns various hotels and apartment buildings on San Francisco's fashionable Nob Hill. She divorced MacMasters shortly before last year's abduction and married San Francisco restaurateur Newton Cope March 26.

In new abduction?

Police issued an all-points bulletin for the kidnaper, whom they said fled in a silver Mustang with the license number SXL 705 driven by another man. The car was rented at San Francisco airport Thursday by a man identified as Dr. R. Higgins, London, England.

Officers said a woman who witnessed the child theft followed the car for several miles down Bayshore Freeway, but gave up the chase and hailed the California Highway Patrol.

State Water Plan Faces Financial Pinch, Cutback

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Reexamination of the role played in water resource development projects by recreation and fish and wildlife enhancement was called for yesterday by Water Resources Director William Gianelli.

"Some redirection is necessary if we are to realistically achieve the high goals of the enabling legislation in light of the budget and institutional and policy constraints," he told the State Water Commission.

"Financing from the general fund is not sufficient to allow all of the plans that have been made to be implemented," he said.

Gianelli proposed a review of the situation by his own department, the Legislature and the commission.

The commission reacted by pledging to help with such a study.

Gianelli also reported that he had set up a panel of four private consulting engineers to explore methods of economizing in the design and construction of the $2.8 billion State Water Project.

The panel will review department design criteria, final designs, specifications and examine construction practices, including the administration of contracts, he said.

"In considering economies, the board is to assure that no adverse effects result regarding the quality of the work or the timeliness of completion," Gianelli told the commission.

The panel consists of Robert Skinner, retired general manager of the Metropolitan Water District of Southern California, Paul Baumann of Los Angeles, J. R. Morton of Sacramento and Robert G. Schuknecht of Portland.

Summerskill Should Stay, Probers Say

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A committee formed to investigate President John Summerskill's "stewardship" of San Francisco State College will recommend that he be retained as head of the school.

A spokesman for the group said after a closed door meeting yesterday a detailed report of its findings would be presented to the California State College's Board of Trustees at its Jan. 24-25 meeting.

The committee was appointed by Trustees Chairman Donald M. Hart following a violent campus demonstration Dec. 6. Summerskill was strongly criticized in some quarters after the incident for not calling in city police to quell the disturbance.

Following yesterday's meeting Hart said "on the basis of the committee's investigation and evaluation of Dr. Summerskill's stewardship, the committee will recommend to the board his retention as president of San Francisco State College."

The committee held its first meeting in Los Angeles Dec. 22. At that time the investigators said they felt Summerskill had handled the Dec. 6 incident with "prudence."

In addition to Hart, the committee was composed of State College Chancellor Glenn S. Dumke, and past chairmen of the trustees, Louis H. Heilbron, Charles Luckman and Albert J. Ruffo.

Heart Doctor Seeking New Opportunity

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP)—Dr. Philip Blaiberg was reported in satisfactory condition and cheerful today after his heart transplant operation. The head of the operating team said he now wants to do a heart transplant on an African.

On the fifth day with his new heart, the 58-year-old dentist is "enjoying life better now than before the operation," Dr. Christiaan N. Barnard said. "Even if he only lives for days, he's had that. We've given him something."

Barnard told a news conference he now wants to perform an operation on an African suffering from a disease that affects only the heart and leaves the rest of the body free of complications usually found in whites. Africans are segregated in white-ruled South Africa.

No Africans have been involved in the first two human heart transplants performed here, although the heart of a mullato man was used in Blaiberg's operation.

This heart, taken from the body of Clive Haupt, 24, after he died from brain hemorrhage, was grafted into the body of Blaiberg.

Mrs. Blaiberg will attend the funeral of Haupt and sent a bouquet of carnations to his widow. Haupt died Tuesday three months after their marriage.

As a mulatto, Haupt was classified as "Cape colored" under South Africa's strict law of apartheid, or racial segregation.

Strike-Bound Chicago Pupils To Stay Home

CHICAGO (AP)—School Supt. James Redmond ordered pupils to stay home Tuesday if the Chicago Teachers Union carries out its threatened strike.

Redmond said last night he was sure some teachers would report to classrooms in the event of a strike but he was canceling classes as a safety measure in case some schools lacked adequate supervisory personnel.

Redmond said the edict will remain in effect as long as there is a work stoppage.

Mayor Richard J. Daley repeated his offer to intervene in the negotiations to avert Chicago's first public school teachers strike but neither side appealed to City Hall.

3,820 Vietnam Citizens Killed

SAIGON (AP)—Viet Cong terrorists killed 3,820 civilians in 1967, more than double the 1,618 slain in the previous year, the U.S. mission said yesterday.

Communist agents were reported to have kidnaped 5,368 civilians, compared with 3,507 abducted in 1966.

The prime Red aim of such tactics is to eliminate local political leaders, teachers and pacification workers.

Quicker Pollution Penalties Sought

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Legislation to permit imposition of quicker penalties for violations of regulations is being sought by directors of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District.

They particularly want a new law aimed at ships which pour smoke out of their funnels, then sail before abatement procedures can be brought.

BRAZILIAN UPROAR

California Colleges Deny Skull Trading

STANFORD (UPI) — Officials at Stanford Medical School and the University of California at Davis have denied that Dr. Antonio Zappala has been engaged in the sale of human heads or parts of the head.

A judge in northeast Brazil has ordered Zappala's arrest for allegedly selling 190 human heads to American universities and hospitals. Brazil authorities say they will seek Zappala's extradition.

COLLEGES' STAND

Zappala is employed by both California schools. A joint statement yesterday said that "in accord with normal practice among anatomists, Dr. Zappala had imported several small portions of skulls for his research. The portions involved were parts of the temporal bone, located in the back and side of the skull."

The statement explained that the canals in the temporal bone were keys to maintaining balance in animals and humans.

"The exchange of this kind of material is quite common among professional anatomists," the statement said. "Recently, for example, Dr. Zappala took six brains prepared at the University of Wisconsin to be used teaching neuroanatomy to medical students in Brazil."

POLICE CLAIMS

But Police Col. Haroldo Torres asserted in Rio de Janeiro that Zappala "exported for commercial ends the heads of indigents who died in Pernambuco University Hospital."

The professor's wife, Cleuza, said from Brazil that her husband had done nothing illegal but was "the victim of internal university politics." Zappala is also professor of anatomy at Pernambuco University.

His associates in Brazil said the heads were shipped as part of an exchange of scientific information. But Torres said they were shipped out of the country as "mammal bones."

Zappala, 36, was honored last year by Stanford students for the excellence of his teaching. He is in this country on a permanent resident visa.

Last Surveyor Probe Poised For Blastoff

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Surveyor 7, America's last unmanned lunar probe, is scheduled for launching early tomorrow toward a soft landing on one of the roughest spots of the moon—the highlands north of the crater Tycho.

Launching of the Atlas-Centaur booster rocket was set for a favorable period between 12:55 a.m. and 3:12 a.m. EST.

Surveyor 7 is the 29th U.S. moon shot in slightly more than nine years. The first 12 failed, but 13 of the last 16 were successful. No more unmanned moon rockets are planned, and the next American moon explorer should be man himself, perhaps in 1969.

Earlier Surveyors confirmed that the four prime astronaut landing sites are safe for manned expeditions. All are in relatively smooth plains along the lunar equator.

With the four sites verified, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration decided to use Surveyor 7 for a purely scientific mission. The Tycho highlands were selected as a target because they appear to be considerably different geologically from the planned astronaut landing areas. Tycho is believed to have been formed by impact of a huge meteoroid.

They also are rugged, making the mission a risky one. Computer analysis gives the probe a 43 per cent chance of success, compared with 47 per cent for Surveyors 5 and 6, which succeeded.

Kennedy Continues Look At Indian School Lacks

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., spent the day talking with American Indians yesterday, then stepped out for a "night on the town."

Host for Kennedy's Southern California stay was former White House press secretary Pierre Salinger.

Kennedy visited the Sherman Institute, a school for Indians in nearby Riverside. He praised the students but was critical of the facility.

He labeled the school's library "inadequate" because it lacked sufficient volumes on Indian history. Joining Kennedy, the chairman of the Senate subcommitte on Indian education, was Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz.

"Indian children have not received the education or the help we promised them," Kennedy said. "It's a matter of great disgrace to our country."

Kennedy promised the 800 students at the institute they would soon have a new gymnasium-auditorium to replace their condemned structure.

He also questioned the advisibility of teaching trades which would soon be obsolete because of automation.

He suggested more courses dealing with electronics and other modern industries be introduced to insure Indians would be trained to enter the American economy.

After his tour Kennedy returned to spend the weekend with the Salingers in Beverly Hills. He, Salinger and Mrs. Salinger left later in the evening for what Kennedy described as "a night on the town."

Kennedy declined to say where they were headed, but observers thought a sure stop would be "The Factory," a Hollywood discotheque in which Salinger has a financial interest.

During his California trip, Kennedy also met with Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh, who said discussions touched on the 1968 presidential campaign although "not with any clairvoyance."

Unruh, a Democrat, said Kennedy indicated to him that the candidacy of Sen. Eugene McCarthy, D - Minn., would not have any effect on his political plans.

Asked about the latest "peace feeler" from Hanoi on bringing about negotiations for a settlement of the Vietnam war, Kennedy, replied:

"It's probably just as well to talk to them (the North Vietnamese) now as perhaps later on."

Kennedy was scheduled to return to Washington tonight.

Charge Dismissed

A charge of petty theft against Dennis Ray Baker of 699 Peach Street, Novato, was dismissed in Marin Municipal Court Thursday when the district attorney reported insufficient evidence to try him for siphoning gasoline from a Novato car Dec. 17.

Unruh Is Cool Toward Lynch Delegation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Assembly Speaker Jesse Unruh says he's not sure he should join a proposed Democratic National Convention delegation headed by State Atty. Gen. Thomas Lynch.

Unruh said yesterday he was much more concerned about the problems of California than with "king making" on the national level.

And the Assembly speaker said he wasn't sure whether his presence in a Lynch delegation would be "helpful or injurious."

"I have some doubt whether I should be on that delegation," he said.

Unruh will go to Sacramento Monday for the opening of the 1968 legislative session.

PRAGUE, Czecholsovakia (AP) — President Antonin Novotny has lost his job as Communist Party chief after 15 years and the background of the new leader, Alexander Dubcek, could mean a quickening of liberal changes, Western diplomatic observers said today.

Dubcek

Dubeck, 46, who won the power struggle in a four-day secret party caucus, is from Slovakia, for years a source of anti-Stalinist ferment in Czechoslovakia. First reports said his backers in the struggle were liberal associates dissatisfied with the progress of economic and party reforms..

The diplomatic observers expressed doubt, however, that Dubcek would lead Czechoslovakia away from support of the Soviet Union and into the renegade status of Yugoslavia or Romania.

Dubcek, Soviet-educated and a party member since his youth, received quick congratulations from Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev, who wished him "success in his work to the good of the Czechoslovak people."

A communique announced that Novotny, 63, would retain his ceremonial post as state president which he had held since 1957 in addition to the party leadership. His presidential term ends next year.

Black Power Spurns Ford Grant

DETROIT (AP) — A proposed $100,000 Ford Foundation grant has been rejected by a militant Negro leader with a warning that Detroit may face another devastating riot in the summer.

Cleage

The money was turned down by the Rev. Albert Cleage, a Black Power advocate who heads the Federation for Self-Determination, a group established to help rebuild Detroit's Negro community.

Cleage told newsmen that the offer of $100,000 in matching funds had too many strings attached. The offer was made through the New Detroit Committee, a blue ribbon group appointed by Gov. George Romney and Mayor Jerome Cavanagh to coordinate rehabilitation efforts following last summer's costly riot.

Cleage, who preaches separatism, said there will be another riot if white leaders fail to allow the black community to run its own affairs.

Dual grants of $100,000 each were offered to Cleage's federation and another Negro group, the Detroit Council of Organizations, which advocates an integrated approach to the city's problems.

In announcing that funds were available, Joseph L. Hudson Jr., chairman of the New Detroit Committee, said that to get the money the two groups would have to agree to communicate with each other, pledge not to use the money for political purposes and submit to auditing procedures on how the money was spent.

"The New Detroit Committee can keep its strings-attached money," Cleage said.

Saigon Insists On Peace Parley Role

SAIGON (UPI)—Noting Hanoi's insistence on leaving Saigon out of any peace negotiations with the United States, President Nguyen Van Thieu today insisted his government be included if talks are held.

Thieu said the Saigon and Hanoi governments should be the major parties in any formal peace negotiations.

Thieu will visit the U.S. at President Johnson's invitation before the November general elections, informed sources said today.

It was expected Thieu would chart the progress of the Vietnam war and perhaps try to convince the American people that his countrymen are pulling their share of the weight of the war, thereby countering criticism that the Vietnamese are not doing their share.

Several times North Vietnam, speaking through the Viet Cong's Liberation Radio in South Vietnam, has rejected the idea of negotiations with Thieu, whom it describes as a "country seller" and "lackey of the U.S. imperialists."

But Hanoi has expressed a willingness to talk with the United States if the Americans unconditionally stop bombing North Vietnam. Hanoi's latest statement was it "will enter negotiations with the United States" if the U.S. stops the bombing and "all other acts of war" against North Vietnam.

Some observers saw Thieu's insistence on Saigon-Hanoi negotiations as a potential roadblock in possible approaches to negotiations by Hanoi and Washington.

Prince Fears Red Pressure On Talks

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (UPI)—Prince Norodom Sihanouk today said conflicting American and Communist pressures on his neutralist regime will largely tie his hands in talks with U.S. presidential envoy Chester W. Bowles here next week.

"I have been caught between the Communist devil and the American deep sea," the Cambodian chief of state told a news conference. "My freedom of action will be greatly limited."

". . . I cannot be the go-between in the conflict between the Americans and the Viet Cong and the North Vietnamese. I cannot consider discussing the (American) eventual right of pursuit into Cambodia or the exchange of prisoners between the Viet Cong and the Americans."

The 42-year-old neutralist leader outlined the strong limitations of his power to negotiate just 24 hours before the arrival of Bowles from New Delhi, where he is the U.S. ambassador. The United States has reported to have been hoping to discuss the possibility of their forces pursuing Vietnam guerrillas into Cambodian hideouts.

Countryman, and Alvin Lampehar.

Trimble said the developers had been before the county's planning commission, but had not yet obtained approval for their project because the proposed development, 25 miles from Red Bluff at a place called Paynes Creek, is in the mountains, where all weather roads are required by county ordinance.

"The developers claimed they would not need all-weather roads, because people would only be using their homes in the summer," said Trimble. "Mr. Green wanted a change in the ordinance, to permit that type of road, and he wanted the supervisors to appoint four new members to the planning commission."

Trimble said Green offered the three supervisors $1,000 as a down payment, and an additional $1,000 each when the change in the ordinance was made.

He said Green made appointments with all three of the supervisors last Thursday. He said he left envelopes for Snelson and Hoag with the wife of Pickell, but returned later in the day and took them back.

He had been to see Snelson and Hoag, said Trimble, and both had turned him down.

When he returned to Pickell's house to retrieve the envelopes for Snelson and Hoag, said Trimble, Green left the envelope containing $1,000 for Pickell, who telephoned the district attorney and turned the money over to him.

Trimble said Green will be given a preliminary hearing in Red Bluff Justice Court. A date for the hearing has not been set.

Permit To Sell Beer Is Denied

Application by Bobby D. Wright to sell beer at Stein and Dine, 5949 Redwood Highway, Ignacio, has been denied by the state Department of Alcoholic Beverage Control.

The department said Wright had a police record which disqualified him for the license, Capitol News Service reported from Sacramento.

The department also reported that it had accepted payment of $256 from Max Key in lieu of suspension of his liquor license at Rancho Rafael, Ignacio. He was charged with permitting consumption of liquor during illegal hours and possessing emptied unbroken liquor bottles on Oct. 31.

DRAFT

action as a "marvelous job" — left little doubt that his insistence on tougher treatment for protesters at least had not been opposed by the White House.

Hershey said that the indictments were an accurate reflection of the Dec. 9 statement he and Atty. Gen. Ramsey Clark hammered out on administration policy toward antiwar protesters and the draft.

He said that statement — initially interpreted as a backdown on his part of his call for speedy induction of draft-age protesters — really meant that the Justice Department was promising swift prosecution of those "who are trying to get our kids in trouble."

"It's a time for exultation," commented Gen. Hershey.

Spock, holding an impromptu news conference a few hours later in his New York apartment, freely admitted counseling young men to resist the draft and said he was ready to go to jail if necessary.

"If going to jail helps the movement, I'm for it," the balding physician declared. "If the government is trying to intimidate us, they will find themselves sadly wrong.

"The Vietnam war is illegal, immoral and detrimental to the United States and the draft resisters are courageous and patriotic young men," he said. "Our indictments and our trial will only create greater opposition to this illegal and immoral war."

Besides Spock and Coffin, those indicted were Marcus Raskin, 33, of Washington, codirector of the Institute for Policy Studies; Michael Ferber, 23, of Boston, a Harvard University graduate student; and author Mitchell Goodman, 44, of New York City and Temple, Maine.

Paul Markham, the U.S. Attorney in Boston, presented the evidence on which the grand jury returned the indictments.

The Justice Department said there were no plans to arrest the men. A spokesman said the five would be notified to appear in U.S. District Court here at a still undetermined date for arraignment.

The indictments brought under the Selective Service Act specifically charge the five men with conspiring to counsel, aid and abet those who wished to refuse to serve in the Armed Forces and comply with other duties required by the draft law.

The maximum penalty for the offense is five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Plea Due Friday On Narcotics Charges

Harry Frank Vantrease, 34, of San Geronimo, is to enter plea Friday to charges of possessing marijuana and a hypodermic syringe Tuesday, when the California Highway Patrol arrested him in a parked car off Highway 101 near Greenbrae.

The district attorney said no complaint will issue, pending further investigation, against Larry R. Minyard, 22, of 20 Madrone Avenue, San Rafael, also arrested in the car.

civilian employees of the federal government would have 2.5 per cent withheld from their monthly paychecks to be matched by another 2.5 per cent from the U. S. Treasury. This money was to be placed in the Civil Service Retirement Trust Fund and invested almost entirely in government bonds.

It was expected that the fund would be so administered it could fully pay out at any given time to all those who had pensions coming. Everybody was happy about such an arrangement for federal employees.

Then something happened. The Congress, for reasons not too readily explained in 1968, became negligent and failed to always appropriate the matching share for deposit in the trust fund. Sometimes it appropriated only a token amount. This sort of thing went on for years and the result is precisely what you think.

As of today, using round figures, the United States government owes the Civil Service Retirement Fund the sum of $42 billion. This huge sum is necessary if the fund is to be kept actuarily sound. The Civil Service Retirement Board knows this quite well.

Over the years, some sporadic efforts have been made to appropriate not only what was called for under the law, but sometimes even larger amounts, so that the government's deficit could be liquidated. Somehow, because of continuing deficits in the national budget, the efforts never succeeded. And so today you have the spectacle of a fund administered by the federal government itself which, in the words of the chairman of the retirement board, is headed for bankruptcy.

If any private insurance company undertook such didoes a grand jury would quickly investigate to ascertain whether the negligence was criminal, and assess the blame where it belonged and then bring the culprits to heel.

Meanwhile, as this vast government establishment goes blithely on its way while the deficit grows, I ask: "Is this any way to run a railroad?"

Housewife Gets Jail Term For Shooting Scrape

Mrs. Simone Victoria Carter, 46-year-old Santa Venetia housewife who reportedly shot her husband in the arm with one of five shots fired during a domestic quarrel, was sentenced to 90 days in Marin County Jail yesterday by Municipal Court Judge Alvin H. Goldstein.

Mrs. Carter, of 805 Rincon Way, was first charged with felonious assault with a deadly weapon on her husband, L. D. Carter, 51, a carpenter.

The charge was later reduced to drawing a pistol in a threatening manner.

Carter, who told authorities his wife also shot him seven years earlier, was shot in the left arm last April 12, after a day of reported beer drinking and quarreling at home.

Judge Goldstein also placed Mrs. Carter on three years of probation, told her to give all guns in the house to probation authorities and to submit to programs of medical and psychiatric care.

Strawbridge Is Feted At Dinner

A no-host dinner honoring retiring Tiburon Councilman and former mayor Gordon W. Strawbridge was held last night at the Dock Restaurant, with Tiburon city councilmen, commissioners and staff workers present.

Strawbridge was presented with a plaque by Mayor John S. Hoffmire in recognition of his service to the city as its first mayor in 1964 and his second term as councilman.

Strawbridge resigned last month.

SAMARITAN'S BAD LUCK IS GOOD AT LAST

Eighteen dollars in donations to replace clothing stolen from Guy Bachelis of Corte Madera when he rescued a child from highway traffic has been turned over to Switchboard of Marin.

Bachelis had a bag of clothing stolen Dec. 18 when he dropped it to carry a little girl off the Tamalpais Drive overpass in Corte Madera as she tried to walk on the traffic heavy road where there is no sidewalk.

The person who took the clothes bag returned it, after seeing articles about the theft in the Independent-Journal, Bachelis said.

He gave the donations from Marin residents to Switchboard of Marin, an all-purpose aid service sponsored by the Unitarian-Univeralist Church of Marin. The Switchboard of Marin number is manned by Bachelis and other volunteers from 4 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday.

This will be the fourth weekend it has operated. Bachelis said that about 35 phone calls were received last weekend from persons in need of various types of help.

Maverick Sent Astray By Holiday

Whether lost, or found by the wrong persons, Maverick is missing. Maverick is an 8-year-old golden retriever that is a stud dog for Guide Dogs for the Blind of San Rafael.

A New Year's Eve party apparently was his undoing. The dog, described as shy of noise although friendly, escaped New Year's Eve from the pen where he is kept by Mr and Mrs. W. N. Breeze of 28 Country Club Drive, Mill Valley. He apparently was frightened by noise from a party at the nearby golf clubhouse.

While not a guide dog himself, Maverick is valuable to the organization as a sire. He wore a leather collar with a Guide Dogs plate attached. Mrs. Breeze describe him as reddish in color and graying around the muzzle.

The dog was found once by someone who called Guide Dogs Tuesday and promised to return him, but later reported the dog had escaped him too.

The Breezes are offering a reward for Maverick's return. The finder can call them or Guide Dogs, Inc.

Mashed potatoes are too soggy and fried potatoes too greasy.

Breading on the chicken fried steak is too soggy.

There is too much gristle in the hamburgers and they should be cooked well done instead of medium rare.

There are not enough onions with liver.

McEndree said the hunger strikers likely are subsisting on candy and snacks which they are allowed to purchase twice a month from the prison canteen and keep in their cells.

As a safety precaution, the strikers are being denied their daily three-hour exercise period outside the "row."

Radio Man To Guide Yule Tree Burning

Carter B. Smith, KSFO disc jockey, will be master of ceremonies at a tree-burning to be held at 6:30 p.m. today in Tiburon, it was announced today by Mrs. Polly Smith of the Tiburon Parks and Recreation Commission, event chairman.

The event, sponsored by Belvedere and Tiburon, will be on a lot between the Safeway store and the Tiburon Lodge.

same press and distributed by a jointly owned firm, the San Francisco Newspaper Printing Co.

First the Examiner failed to appear yesterday when local Guildsmen balked at crossing the picket line, which was supposed to be purely "informational." Members of other unions at the plant followed suit.

By late yesterday afternoon, when the morning Chronicle normally would be readying its first edition, its news, press, composing and mailing rooms were deserted. No trucks waited at the dock for bundles of papers. None appeared.

Executive editor Scott Newhall said only: "The Chronicle has not missed a day's publication for over a century."

Chronicle executives did distribute early today a six-page, 8½ by 13 inch, edition apparently run off on an office copying machine. "We apologize to all of you for this drastically curtailed publication," a front page editorial said. An unidentified spokesman estimated no more than 2,000 of the papers were run off.

The Mailers Union went on strike at 8:45 p.m. yesterday. The mailers said they have worked at the Chronicle-Examiner plant without a contract since last March 4, and that they put up their own picket line after a strike vote and obtaining sanction from the international union.

In Los Angeles, the Herald-Examiner asked the National Labor Relations Board to declare the informational picketing in San Francisco an unfair labor practice. This procedure normally requires about three days while the NLRB asks for a federal court restraining order until it can decide the case on its merits.

As for the Mailers, a spokesman said in announcing the strike that it would "not at this time" apply to the Oakland Tribune and the San Jose Mercury where the mailers also have been working without a contract for several months.

Ferry Permit Dispute Up To Council

Tiburon City Council will receive conflicting opinions Monday from its public services committee on a request by Milton McDonogh, of Angel Island tours, that the city protest public utilities commission issuance of a permit for similar tours by Harbor Carriers, Inc.

The council meets at 8 p.m. at City Hall.

Councilman William R. Bremer said today he will recommend the council express its confidence in McDonogh's ferry service but not protest against Harbor Carriers. The San Francisco-based company is asking to expand its Tiburon to San Francisco and Tiburon to Angel Island service.

Retiring councilman Gordon W. Strawbridge, however, said he will recommend the council support McDonogh's protest as he feels that "Harbor Carriers does not demonstrate the need for increased service."

Contract for drainage and sidewalk improvements on Tiburon Boulevard is scheduled to be awarded. The bids will be opened before the meeting by City Engineer Ray W. Foreaker.

OBITUARIES

John Southmayd Dies At 48

John Southmayd, 48, secretary-manager of the Marin County Credit Association since 1958, died last evening at a local hospital.

Southmayd had suffered for several years from leukemia, but continued to work until Thursday. He suffered a stroke yesterday, entered the hospital and died at 6 p.m.

He was born in Ogden, Utah, and had been a resident of Marin since 1936. He was graduated from Marin Junior College and University of California at Los Angeles, and was an all-conference soccer player at UCLA.

He served four years in the Army Air Corps during World War II, rising to the rank of captain in the Pacific theater. From 1945 to '55 he was western division manager for Thor Corp., washing machine manufacturers. He joined the credit bureau as assistant manager in 1955 and became manager in 1958.

He was a member of the board of managers of Marin Young Men's Christian Association and a governing member of the San Francisco YMCA. He was a member and former Sunday school teacher of the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael, and belonged to the San Rafael Rotary Club and Marevelous Marin Breakfast Club.

He leaves his wife, Louise, and two sons and a daughter, Eric, Robert, and Cynthia, at the family home at 134 Kinross Drive, San Rafael.

Harry M. Williams Mortuary is in charge of funeral arrangements.

JULES BASEVANT

CHALON - SUR - SAONE, France (AP) — Jules Basevant, 90, former president of the International Court of Justice at The Hague, died today at his home in the village of Anost.

Basevant was a professor of international law at the Universities of Rennes, Grenoble and Paris. He was a member of the French delegation to the Versailles peace treaty.

JOSEPHINE QUANDT

Josephine Quandt, 75, who came to Marin County a year ago from Chicago, died yesterday at a local hospital.

Mrs. Quandt, who lived at 225 Nova Albion Way, San Rafael, came here with her husband, Paul, a printer, who died last August.

She is survived by her son, Paul W. Quandt, of San Rafael, by two grandchildren and a great-grandchild.

Services will be held Monday at 9:45 a.m. at Keaton's Mortuary, San Rafael, and at 10 a.m. at St. Isabella's Church, Terra Linda, where a Requiem Mass will be offered. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery. Rosary services will be at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Keaton's Chapel.

IRVINE T. LOW

Irvine T. Low, retired Marin Municipal Water District employee who had lived in Sausalito since 1906, died in a local hospital yesterday after a short illness. He was 77.

Low lived at 145 Edwards Avenue. He was a member of Mill Valley Lodge 356, Free and Accepted Masons, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Lodge 1108, San Rafael; Sausalito Lions Club, Knights of Pythias and Independent Order of Foresters.

He is survived by his wife, Susan; two sisters, Mrs. Lucile C. Green of Danville, Ill., and Mrs. Arline C. Boles of Grass Valley, and a brother, Paul V. Low of Sausalito.

Funeral will be Monday at 2 p.m. at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley, with the Mill Valley Masonic Lodge officiating. Burial will be in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery, San Rafael.

MRS. MAY E. CEDERBERG

Private family funeral for May E. Cederberg, 78, longtime Mill Valley resident who died in a local hospital Thursday after a short illness, was held yesterday at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley.

Mrs. Cederberg, who was retired, had last worked as office manager for Brown's Furniture, Mill Valley. She was past president of Mill Valley Outdoor Art Club and was also a member of Sierra Club and Marin Audubon Society.

She is survived by three sisters, Helen A. Rohde of San Francisco, Alma E. Johnson of Tiburon and Emily I. Starck of San Rafael, and a brother, Herbert O. Engel of Mill Valley.

MRS. GLADYS I. ENGELBRECHT

Funeral for Gladys O. Engelbrecht, a former resident of San Rafael, will be at 2 p.m. tomorrow at St. John's United Church of Christ, 501 Laguna Honda Boulevard, San Francisco.

Mr. Engelbrecht, 64, died Thursday in a San Francisco hospital after a long illness.

A native of San Francisco, she moved to Marin County in 1907. Her husband, Rev. Arthur J. Engelbrecht, was pastor of the old St. Matthew's Evangelical Church in San Rafael.

She moved to San Bruno in 1923 when her husband became pastor of a church there. He died in 1942.

Mrs. Engelbrecht was a former member of the Congregational Church in San Rafael.

She is survived by two sons, Arthur J. Engelbrecht Jr. of San Francisco and Lloyd C. Engelbrecht of Chicago; three daughters, Mrs. Ralph Guenther of Los Angeles County and Mrs. Frank Vanni and Mrs. David Taylor, of Fairfax; a brother, Wallace M. Osteyee of San Francisco; a sister, Dr. Jessie Welliver of San Diego, and 12 grandchildren.

Friends may call at Halsted and Co., in San Francisco. The family prefers memorial contributions to St. John's United Church of Christ.

The Boys She Dates Talk Love, Marriage, But She's Not Ready

DEAR HELEN:

I always thought girls were more romantic than boys, but now I'm not so sure. I've dated only four fellows and every one of them has talked love and marriage, while I'm still just friends. Sure I want them to like me, but they want to own me, for keeps. So we break up, and they get awfully hurt.

Now I'm writing to two servicemen. I made it plain that I'm just a good pal. But today I received a letter from each of them, and each told me he was in love with me! Both are in Vietnam.

Do other girls have this trouble, and how do you keep boys from falling in love? — NOT READY

DEAR NOT:

Yes, other girls have this trouble, and, yes, boys often fall harder and faster than girls; or at least they're more apt to say so. But they recover sooner, for mostly it isn't love; only the romantic antics of growing up. Overseas servicemen are hardest hit, as they're lonely and dreaming. Be firm about being just friends, and I think they'll calm down. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

This is to the teen who wondered if there is an Over-Smokers Anonymous. We've started one called Smoking Opponents Society, a non-profit organization which provides a tie tack or lapel pin, plus some convincing literature and a wallet membership card. The idea is, when you're wearing the pin, you can't light up.

I quit when my teen-agers began to think they might start smoking. Am I glad! I wake up easier in the morning, can still keep up with the boys in hockey, touch football, skiing, etc.

The I went one step further and helped organize the club, which is going great, and also going national. — P.B.F., SMOKING OPPONENTS SOCIETY

DEAR READERS:

I've written to P.B.F. for more information about his Smoking Opponents Society, and by the time this article is printed I should know all about it. Send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll pass the scoop along to you. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I don't want to brag, but I've got the greatest parents in the world. We may not be rich, but in my family, who needs it? We've got each other.

My Mom and Dad are one of the best looking couples I know. All my friends think they're boss. They can be talked to about anything without embarrassment. They take the time to become involved with kids, even to playing football with us.

My parents have raised us three kids (17, 14, and eight) to know right from wrong and to know what this world expects of us. I hope I can raise my children as well — DEBBIE, AGE 17

New President Is An Avid Book Buyer

President of the San Geronimo National Women's Golf Club which was formed in August, 1967, is Mrs. William L. Blair of Fairfax.

A founding member of the club, Lucile Blair has also been co-captain of the organization which promotes and directs golf tournaments for the members. Interested women golfers may join.

Mrs. Blair, who has her own accounting business, is active in other organizations. She is past president of the Delta Zeta Alumnae in Marin, past president of the Fairfax Guild of Sunny Hills, past president of Marin Foundation Friends of Araquipa the immediate past president of the Northern California Council of City Panhellenics, and active in Marin County Panhellenic affairs.

She received her A.B. degree from the University of California.

The Blairs have lived in Marin for 20 years. Mr. Blair is manager of the employee relations department of Chevron Chemical Co. They have two sons — Richard E. Blair of San Anselmo, and Steven L. Blair of Chico.

The new president says she enjoys golf, bridge and reading, confessing that she is "an avid buyer of books, whose problem is trying to find the time to read them."

Other incoming officers are Mesdames Lawrence Gapinski, San Anselmo, co-captain; William Sarm, Tiburon, treasurer, and Leonard Mathews, San Rafael, secretary.

Miss Palmer Is Bride Of Thomas Wolf

Dennis Cunningham Palmer became the bride of Thomas Wolf Saturday at Temple Emanu-El in San Francisco.

The bride is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard John Palmer of San Francisco and the granddaughter of Fred E. Palmer of Belvedere. Her brother is Mark Ellsworth Palmer.

Dennis wore an ivory satin gown with beaded detail. Erica Black was maid of honor and Lucy Wolf, the bridegroom's sister, was the bridesmaid. Both wore silk gowns in a deep orange shade.

Thomas is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lowe Wolf of Rydal, Pa. He is the brother of Mrs. Herbert Fogel, Nicholas, Andrew, Catherine and Lucy Wolf. His brother Andrew was best man. Brooks McChesney and Mark Palmer, the bride's brother, were ushers.

A reception was held at the bride's parents' home in San Francisco.

The bride is a graduate of Katherine Delmar School and attends Swarthmore College in Swarthmore, Pa. The bridegroom is also a student at Swarthmore.

PATRICIA PENHALLOW

Pat Penhallow Engaged To Wed James Greenwood

The engagement of Patricia Mary Penhallow of Oakland to James Wesley Greenwood of Richmond has been announced. Pat is the daughter of Mrs. Patricia Penhallow of Sleepy Hollow and of David P. Penhallow of Belvedere.

A June wedding is planned by the future bride, who attended Marin Catholic and Sir Francis Drake high schools and was graduated from College of Notre Dame in Belmont. She is attending San Francisco State College to receive an elementary teaching credential and is employed with an insurance administrators firm in San Francisco.

Patricia is the sister of Peter, Rosemarie and Arthur Penhallow of San Anselmo, Mrs. Cynthia Gantenbein of Corte Madera, David Penhallow of Encino and Sister Marion, College of Notre Dame, Belmont.

James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Greenwood of Richmond. He was graduated from Richmond High School and has a teaching credential from San Francisco State College. James is a physical education teacher and football and baseball coach at Albany High School.

He is the brother of Clifford Greenwood of Concord, Robert Good of Richmond, John Good of Arizona and Harvey Good of San Pablo.

Scott-Diehl Vows In San Anselmo

When Sandra Anne Diehl became the bride of Bruce Alan Scott on Dec. 30 at St. Anselm's Church, the Rev. William Burns officiated, and was assisted by the Rev. Harold E. Hallett, rector of St. John's Episcopal Church in Ross.

An ivory satin gown with lace bodice was the choice of the bride, who also wore a Cathedral length Brussel's point lace veil. She was the fifth bride in her family to wear the heirloom veil.

Mrs. George Canaba of Colorado Springs, and Mrs. Dan Corley of Lebanon, Tenn., were matrons of honor. They wore floor length red gowns. The bride's niece, Linda Corley of Lebanon, Tenn., as junior bridesmaid, wore a floor length dress of pale pink.

Wayne Kite of Petaluma was best man. Ushering were Dan Corley of Lebanon, Tenn. and Brian Paul Scott, the bridegroom's brother, of Novato.

The couple greeted guests at the Officers Club at Hamilton Air Force Base. After a wedding trip to Yosemite, they will live in Fairfax.

Sandra is the daughter of Lt. Col. and Mrs. Charles Evans Diehl of Ross. She attended La Chatelaine in Switzerland, Sir Francis Drake High School and the University of Nevada. She is employed at Presbyterian Hospital in San Francisco.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton G. Scott of Novato. He is the brother of Pamela Ann Scott and Craig Stephen Scott of Novato. His grandmother is Mrs. Herbert O. Yohner of Vallejo.

Bruce is a graduate of St. Vincent Ferrar High School and Golden Gate College. He is employed by Safeway Stores.

Oliver Anderson To Wed Marilyn Jo Monroney

The engagement of Marilyn Jo Mulroney of Tiburon to Oliver Anderson of Tiburon, has been announced by the future bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Mulroney of Aberdeen, Wash.

MARILYN MULRONEY

The future bride, who is a Pan-American Airways stewardess, was educated in Washington, where she was graduated from Aberdeen High School, and attended Gray's Harbor Junior College and Seattle University. Her brothers are Terrance and Joseph Mulroney of Aberdeen.

"Bud," as the future bridegroom is called, is the son of Mrs. Oliver Anderson of San Francisco. He is a graduate of Lincoln High School in San Francisco, the City College of San Francisco, the University of California and the School of Pharmacy at U.S. Medical Center in San Francisco. He is employed at Letterman Hospital Pharmacy.

SEW SIMPLE

With Return Of Waistline Seam, Darts Are Difficult

By EUNICE FARMER

"I just finished my first dress in years with a waistline seam and was very unhappy with the results. The skirt was very full below the darts in the front. The fabric was silk and couldn't be steamed in to fit.

Since I had already pressed the darts and the marks wouldn't come out, I simply ripped one of the darts out and made a seam down the side fronts taking out the excess fabric. The skirt looks great now, but there must be another way." — MRS. M.A.

DEAR MRS. M.A.:

You have made the mistake so many women make when it comes to darts. You should never use two darts in the front of your skirt unless they are very tiny. Darts are simply an aid to fitting; the deeper the dart, the more shape you will have. It stands to reason that the front of a skirt should be smooth, only your back has a shaping (7 inches below the waist.)

Skirt darts in front should never be more than 3½ inches long and should be about ¼-inch deep, no more. If you have a large tummy, it is best to eliminate the darts. Then stitch two rows of stitching with the longest stitch and gently pull up the ease until it fits the waistline without adding excess fabric to the front of the skirt.

I must comment that you did come up with a clever solution to the problem. This would be an easy way to correct this problem in anything you have already completed, but try the correct method of making darts in the future.

Mrs. E. Griffith, St. Louis, Mo., is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestion.

"Everyone knows how to turn collars, but here's my tip on turning cuffs. Rip the cuffs off the sleeves, reverse the cuffs so that the top of the cuff is underneath. Take the right cuff and pin it in place on the left sleeve and the left cuff on the right sleeve. Sew the cuffs in place, change the buttons, and you have new cuffs which should last the life of the shirt."

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

You told us one time about using grosgrain ribbon as a binding. I have seen this used and wonder how it can be put around a circular neckline. Also, when I use it, it turns out puffy and looks pulled, any tips? MRS. A. T.

DEAR MRS. A. T.:

First, when using grosgrain ribbon for a trimming, be sure it is the milliners ribbon that has the piquot edges. The type you see packaged is usually the type that has a tightly woven edge, and it will pull when applied as a trimming.

The milliners ribbon can be shaped with the steam iron. Press it in an outer curve on the wrong side of the ribbon. However, I haven't found this too successful for a Peter Pan collar.

Grosgrain edging works beautifully around the edges of a notched collar, down the front of a garment, or edging straight pockets. It's best to make your own bias trimming if it is to be used as a contrasting trim. This will curve beautifully.

DEAR EUNICE FARMER,

I have just completed a jacket that is double-breasted and has metal buttons for the closing. The shank on the buttons has made them easy to sew on. However, on the side that is decorative and not functional, they seem to droop down and don't look like they match the ones that are actually buttoned. Is there a special way to sew these buttons on? MRS. J. H. H.

DEAR MRS. J. H. H.:

Whenever you have buttons with a metal shank that aren't actually being used to close a garment, try flattening the shank. Press on the button gently, and the shank will usually bend. Bend it fairly close to the button. When you sew it on, it will stay nice and close to your garment.

Many times jeweled buttons are sewed on for decorative purposes and the garment is closed with snaps, in this case it would be wise to bend the shanks down also.

When sewing on buttons without shanks, sew the buttons close to the garment when they are simply decorative. Think about how the button will be used before deciding how it should be applied.

For simple, illustrated instructions on making bound buttonholes send for my free leaflet "Bound Buttonholes." To obtain you copy send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal, Box 330, San Rafael.

'Mothers' Night Out' Dinner Set For Marin Catholic Club Jan. 17

It will be Mothers' Night Out when the Marin Catholic Women's Club has its annual dinner Jan. 17 at the school's cafeteria, announce chairmen Mrs. Charles Chiapelleone and Mrs. Joseph Anselmo. The theme will be Italian, with menu and decorations to match.

The social hour is set for 6:30 p.m., with dinner an hour later. A brief meeting and some entertainment are planned. Assisting the chairmen are Mesdames Arthur Wilson and Leno Franzini, reservations; and Mesdames Arthur Goepp, Albert Paulist and Harry Butterworth.

FATHERS, TOO, will have their night out when John MacPhail Parent-Teacher Association has Father-Son Night on Thursday in the Santa Venetia middle school gymnasium. The Terra Linda High School gymnastics group, directed by Hank Yamagata, will perform. The program will get under way at 7:30 p.m.

"I DARE YOU" is the new year challenge to be presented Tuesday by Mrs. J. E. Christian for the meeting of the Woman's Society of Christian Service of the Mill Valley Methodist Church. The business meeting in the church youth room at 11 a.m. will be followed by luncheon at noon and the program in the fellowship hall.

Hostesses will be Mesdames Robert Alexander, Rudolph Dressler, Belman Maddox, Erwin Williams and Ralph Mathiesson.

THE SAN RAFAEL Parks and Recreation Department is sponsoring a modern-jazz dance class for 7th and 8th grade girls on Monday afternoons. The class will be conducted at the Community Recreation Center, 2nd and Brooks streets. The fee for the eight lessons is payable upon pre-registration on Monday at 4 p.m. The class will start Jan. 15 at the center, for one hour each Monday for eight weeks.

BRUCE FARRINGTON of Sonoma will speak at the Marin Country Club Garden Club meeting at 1 p.m., Monday, at the Marin County Club in Novato. Mr. Farrington is an authority on iris cultivation and will show slides on the beauty of the blooms.

SKIP CLIPPINGER and her dancers of San Rafael will give the program at the luncheon of the Officers Wives Club at the Officer's Club at Hamilton Air Force Base on Tuesday.

A social hour will be held at 12:30 p.m. and luncheon will be served at 1 p.m., sponsored by the wives of officers of the Western Aerospace and Recovery and the 41st Aero Rescue and Recovery Squadron. Co-chairmen for the first luncheon for the Officers Wives Club in the newly decorated club are Mesdames Tracy J. Petersen and Maynard R. Rhoades.

THE EDUCATION for Childbirth program opened a nine-week series of classes for expectant parents on Thursday. Afternoon classes will be from 1 to 2:30 p.m. and evening classes from 8 to 9:30 p.m. each Thursday. Registered physical therapists Mrs. Gunhild H. Brown and Mrs. Margaret B. Farley are the instructors. Classes are conducted at Mrs. Brown's office at 711 D Annex, San Rafael.

The nine meetings include exercises to help the expectant mother be more comfortable during pregnancy, exercises for relaxation, posture training and breathing techniques.

DR. DON DE LAY, Stanford University research consultant, will speak at a general Parent-Teacher Association meeting at Tamalpais High School on Jan. 16 at 8 p. m. in Ruby Scott Auditorium. District faculties, trustees, parents, students and the public are invited.

"Teacher training and innovations" is the title of Dr. De Lay's talk. He is with the education department at Stanford and, as consultant to over 400 schools from New York to Hawaii, Dr. De Lay has had a chance to see the newest learning theories in practice.

The educator says, "There's just too much teaching and not enough learning . . . and the motto for learning seems to be 'poke it in their ears and have it come out the end of their fingers' . . . there is no change in the educational process until there is a change in the way teachers behave with kids and centralize their role as the leader of learning."

Harry Friman Claims Bride In Seattle Church Ceremony

Harry Friman of Greenbrae claimed Linda Settersten as his bride at an 8 o'clock ceremony at the Bethel Presbyterian Church in Seattle, Wash., on Dec. 23.

For the candlelight ceremony the bride wore a full length white lace gown with a lace train. Arlene Lynn Lamont of Seattle was the maid of honor, Robin Ackerlund of Seattle and Sally Settersten, the bride's sister of Seattle, were bridesmaids. The attendants all wore floor length red velvet dresses trimmed with red satin.

James C. Shields of Vashon, Wash., was best man. Don Wodjenski and Ray Johnson, both of Seattle, were the ushers.

A reception at the church followed the ceremony. After a wedding trip to Carmel, the couple will live in Greenbrae.

Mr. and Mrs. Ward F. Settersten of Seattle are the bride's parents. Harry is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Friman of Ross. He is the grandson of Mrs. Harry D. Friman of Ross and of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Tambussa of San Rafael.

Linda is a graduate of Ingraham High School in Seattle, and attended the University of Washington. The bridegroom was graduated from Redwood High School and attended the College of Marin. He is in the U.S. Marine Corps Reserves. He is employed by the Pacific Gas and Electric Co. in San Francisco.

Tonfanelli-Quandt Rite In East Bay

David Louis Tofanelli of San Rafael claimed Mary Louise Quandt of Lafayette as his bride in a ceremony at the Walnut Creek Presbyterian Church on Dec. 24.

Given in marriage by her brother, John Quandt, the bride wore a peau de soie and Alencon lace gown. She is the daughter of Mrs. William Quandt of Lafayette and the late Mr. Quandt.

Attendants were Mrs. John Barclay of Medford, Ore., matron of honor, and Mrs. Walter Shugert of Danville and Mrs. William Schutt of Central Valley.

Donald Verdu of San Jose was best man, and ushering were John Christensen of San Rafael and William Schutt.

A reception at Concord Inn followed the wedding.

The bride was graduated from Diablo Valley College and St. Francis Hospital School of Nursing.

Her husband is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tofanelli of Daly City. He was graduated from San Francisco State College last year.

Looks Like An Active Year For Hems, Waists, Prices

By JEAN SPRAIN WILSON

NEW YORK (AP) — If skirts go down, prices will go up, and if waistlines go in, then hips may spread out.

That is the way things looked Thursday at the spring style previews for the fashion press conducted by the New York Couture Group.

As a model in a $325 cotton coat and dress strode the runway, manufacturer Vincent Monte-Sano said that new union contracts and higher fabric costs had already driven the cost of women's apparel up by 20 per cent.

By spring, he said, the high cost of being chic may soar to nearly a third more than it was last year. And that is in the age of the miniskirt, which does not take much footage to cover the requirements.

"God help us if hemlines go down," Monte-Sano said, speaking only from the point of view of prices. "Adding a half yard or a yard to those bulky miniskirts will really add to their cost."

To men who pay the clothing bills at any rate, that seemed to be a practical reason for keeping the leg-watching game going strong.

If women's waistlines grew on the average by two inches without the constriction of belts—as it was reported Wednesday that they had—then the seating equipment seemed due for expansion.

More Legal Fights Over 'Bonnie, Clyde'

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — Two separate lawsuits—seeking a total of $2,775,000 in damages—are on file in Texas courts against the producers of the movie "Bonnie and Clyde."

One suit filed yesterday in Houston asks $1,750,000. Another filed a month ago in Dallas seeks $1,025,000.

The Houston suit alleges the movie defamed the character of the late Texas Ranger Capt. Frank Hamer Sr., who the petition says killed more than 100 outlaws in the line of duty and was wounded himself more than 20 times during a nearly 50-year law enforcement career.

Hamer's widow and his son, Frank Hamer Jr., are plaintiffs in the suit.

The suit charged the movie portrayed Hamer as a "buffoon and as an incompetent and malicious officer" instead of "A heroic figure which in fact he is."

Clyde Barrow and his cigar-smoking moll, Bonnie Parker, were a crime team in four states during the 1930s. They are generally credited with killing 12 persons before they were shot to death May 23, 1934 by Texas Rangers and other police officers in an ambush set up at Arcadia, La.

Warren Beatty directed the movie and played the part of Barrow. Bonnie Parker was played by Faye Dunaway.

The Dallas suit was filed by Mrs. Billie Jean Parker Moon and her husband, A. B. Moon of Mesquite, Tex. It alleged the movie "blackened the memory" of Bonnie Parker. Mrs. Moon is a sister of Bonnie Parker.

Warner Brothers-Seven Arts Inc., was named defendant in the Houston suit. The Dallas suit named as defendants Warner Brothers, Interstate Theaters and Beatty.

Suspect Bound Over

John Allen Acree, 20, of 209 Cardinal Road, Tamalpais Valley, was bound over to Superior Court by Marin Municipal Court Judge Alvin H. Goldstein yesterday to face a charge of marijuana possession. After the preliminary hearing, the judge told Acree to be in Superior Court Jan. 15.

Theft Trial Set

Phillip Walter White, 27, and Vernon Sinclair Cox, 39, both of 924 San Anselmo Avenue, San Anselmo, are to be tried by jury April 1 on charges they stole $7.58 worth of goods from Montgomery Ward Co. in the Corte Madera Shopping Center Dec. 6. The pair pleaded innocent Thursday.

San Rafael Teachers' Art To Be Displayed

Art work by the staff of San Rafael city schools will be displayed from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. weekdays, Monday through Jan. 19, at the board of education room of the district administration building, Third and E streets.

Included will be oil paintings, watercolors, pastels, sculpture, ceramics and weaving.

Synanon Official Sues Wife For Divorce

Richard Anderson Bancroft Jr., assistant director of Synanon Foundation at Marshall, sued his wife, Francine Eleanor, for divorce in Marin Superior Court yesterday.

He alleged cruelty and asked custody on their daughter. Bancroft said they married Sept. 16, 1964, and separated June 19, 1967.

PARKING PUZZLER

In Oslo, Norway, a young woman driver scratches her head wondering just how to get out of her parking place, marked only by a protruding meter. The city fathers have decided that recent heavy snows placed too much strain on the budget, and halted snow removal operations. The correspondent did not say whether they stopped issuing parking citations. (UPI Cablephoto)

Cold Sweeps Central U.S.

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

A new blast of polar air plagued a vast stretch of the nation's midsection today.

Snow, sleet and freezing rain posed treacherous driving conditions for a 14-state area from the Texas Panhandle to Maryland.

The mercury plunged to 49 below in northwestern Minnesota.

The new surge of arctic air is the third this week to numb the midcontinent. By contrast, winds from the ocean kept temperatures relatively mild in Alaska. Anchorage and Juneau had high readings Friday of 26 and Fairbanks 7.

Freezing rain slicked highways as far south as South Carolina and Georgia in the East.

An earlier cold snap lingered over the Great Lakes and centered its punch on northern New York and New England. The temperature in the Twin Mountain, N.H., region dropped to -40 for the second time this week. Massena, N.Y., on the Canadian border, had a low of -20.

Crackup Injures Mother, Child

A Mill Valley woman and her 3-year-old son suffered minor injuries yesterday at 7:06 p.m. when her car jumped the curb and hit a building at 173 Throckmorton Avenue, Mill Valley police reported.

Mrs. Barbara Melick, 32, of 14 Creek Lane, was treated for a cut on her nose at Marin General Hospital. Her son, Christopher, was treated for a cut on the forehead.

Police said Mrs. Melick's car was in gear when she turned on the ignition after it had been parked. It did not damage the building, according to police.

Computer Lease Urged For Golden Gate Span

Lease of a $125,570 computer to process toll and traffic data was proposed yesterday by the staff of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District.

The proposal was made before the district's building and operating committee, which asked for further information before acting on it.

District engineer Robert E. Shields said he had gone to several manufacturers to review their computers, and found one made by International Business Machines "by far the most superior." He and Gen. Mgr. James Adam recommended that the district agree to lease-purchase of the "model 1800 data acquisition and control system" at a cost of $3,225 a month, including maintenance.

The present 31-year-old toll registry equipment is "antiquated," reported Adam, "and an impediment to the free flow of traffic and a source of accelerated cost due to frequent breakdowns." Replacement parts often are no longer available, and must be made by bridge employees.

The computer also would take over the "long, laborious process' of bookkeeping now done manually by the district staff, Adam said, and could handle auditing and preparation of payrolls, inventories and statistics.

Roscoe G. Peterson, an IBM salesman, said about one-third of the monthly lease-purchase cost of $3,225 would be for maintenance. If the district bought the computer, the monthly maintenance cost would be $205, he said.

Peterson said the state Division of Bay Toll Crossings had dropped a proposal for a computer for toll processing, but Shields said one is in use on the George Washington Bridge.

The committee asked Adam to find out how much the present system of registering tolls costs and to consider sharing the computer — and its cost — with other governmental agencies.

Adam said the toll equipment has been "outmoded" for several years, but that its replacement had been put off during consideration of a second deck.

"Now that the second deck is in the indefinite future," he said, "we must replace the equipment."

"Ultimate modernization will require complete replacement of all existing facilities, including the toll booths, in order to accommodate better the ever-increasing traffic," Adam told directors. The bridge board has no timetable for relocation and expansion of the toll plaza from 14 to 28 lanes.

The expansion will be necessary even without a second deck, Shields commented after the meeting.

Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District directors also:

JOINTS — Called for bids for expansion joint sealing at an estimated cost of $25,000.

STIFFENERS — Called for bids to replace 1,500 floor beam stiffeners at an estimated cost of $8,500.

VEHICLES — Called for bids to buy a half-ton pick-up truck and a sedan to transport maintenance crews.

Classes In Judo, Dance Announced

Classes in judo and modern ballet for children over 6 will be offered by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department at the Community Recreation Center at Second and Brooks streets.

Judo classes will run from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesdays beginning Jan. 16, with the fee for the 10-week course payable at the first class meeting. Dance classes will be from 10 to 11 a.m. Saturdays for children 7 to 9 and 11 a.m. to noon Saturdays for those 10 years and older, beginning Jan. 15. Fees for the eight-week class are payable at the first class meeting.

Series Of Guitar Lessons Announced

A six-week series of guitar lessons for adults began today at the Co-Op Marin, Corte Madera.

One-hour lessons will continue on five future Saturdays, beginning at 12:30 p.m. Guitars may be rented for this beginners course, sponsored by the co-op.

Hub Car Clouted

Theft of a transistor radio, a $35 clock, and fishing gear from the unlocked car of Robert B. Hubbard, parked at his home at 39 Alderney Road was reported yesterday by San Anselmo police.

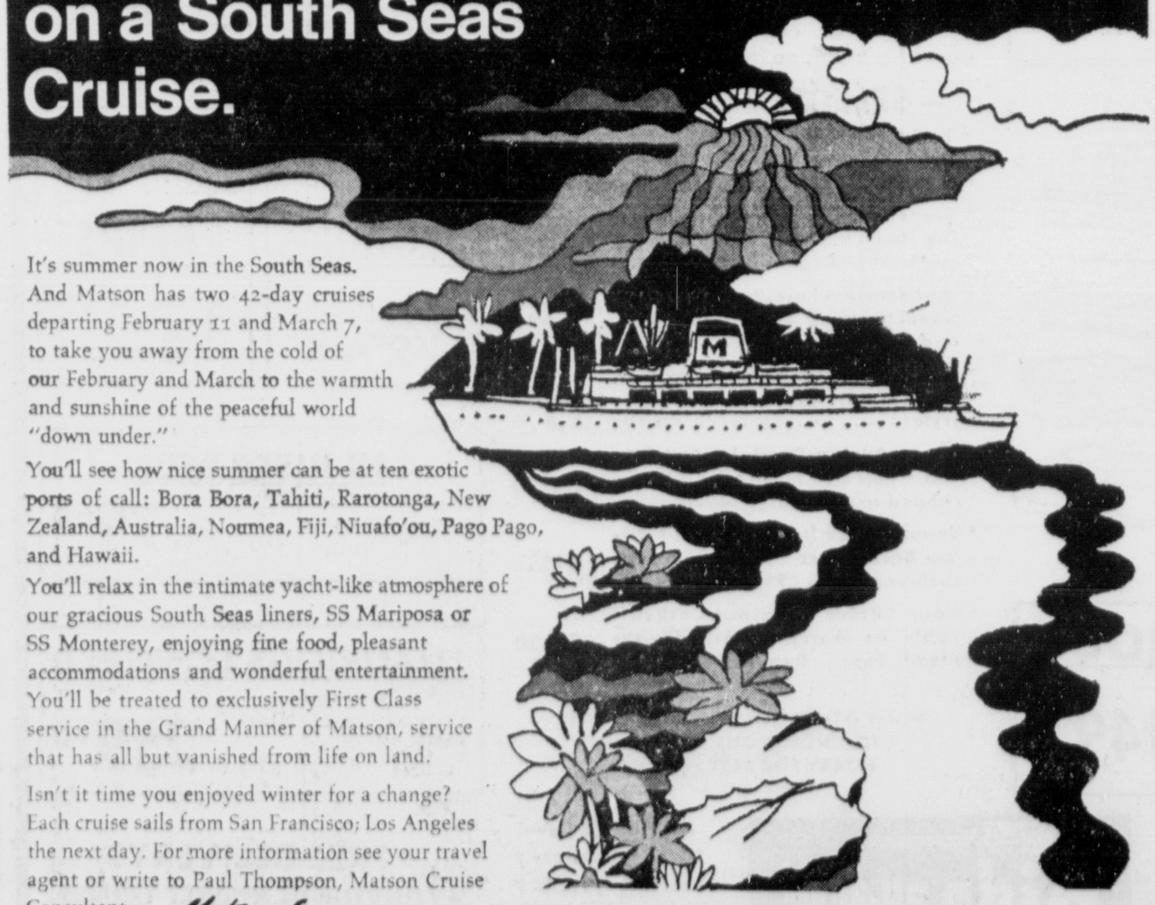
Starting February 11th or March 7th you can enjoy summer for 42 days on a South Seas Cruise.



It's summer now in the South Seas. And Matson has two 42-day cruises departing February 11 and March 7, to take you away from the cold of our February and March to the warmth and sunshine of the peaceful world "down under."

You'll see how nice summer can be at ten exotic ports of call: Bora Bora, Tahiti, Rarotonga, New Zealand, Australia, Noumea, Fiji, Niuafo'ou, Pago Pago, and Hawaii.

You'll relax in the intimate yacht-like atmosphere of our gracious South Seas liners, SS Mariposa or SS Monterey, enjoying fine food, pleasant accommodations and wonderful entertainment. You'll be treated to exclusively First Class service in the Grand Manner of Matson, service that has all but vanished from life on land.

Isn't it time you enjoyed winter for a change? Each cruise sails from San Francisco; Los Angeles the next day. For more information see your travel agent or write to Paul Thompson, Matson Cruise Consultant, Matson Lines 110 Mission Street, San Francisco, CA 94105 • 982-7700

SAFETY INFORMATION: SS Mariposa and SS Monterey, registered in the U. S., meet International Safety Standards for new ships developed in 1960.

SMALL DELIGHT $19,750
And a very large bargain is this 2-bedroom, 1-bath well-cared-for house in convement San Rafael. Framed by hedges, fence and shade trees, the garden is a horticulturist's dream with terraced rock gardens, fruit trees, lanai and covered patio. This can't last! San Rafael.

WEEPING WILLOW TREE $19,900
in the large level back yard of this 3 bedroom conveniently located house. Large breakfast area in the kitchen and a fireplace in the living room for your cozy winter evenings. Try 10% down, Novato.

COMMUTER'S SPECIAL $29,950
Like the idea of the bus right in front of your house? Or perhaps you're looking for a home with offfice combination. This house may be the answer to your special needs — with 3 bedrooms, basement, parking area, 2 entrances — all on a large corner lot. San Rafael.

HOME ORCHARD $31,900
The fruit trees growing in the property of this 4-bedroom, 2-bath Eichler will test your ingenuity for turning fruit on the vine into delicacies for your table! While you're thinking, enjoy easy living in a carefree house that's a stone's throw from Northgate shopping and schools, Terra Linda.

STONE WALLS . . . $39,500
Do make a house stand strong, and this solid-walled home is like the rock of Gibraltar! Spacious, airy rooms have high ceilings and views overlooking San Rafael. If you're handy and have a yen to make an older home your personal statement, this close-in property is for you. San Rafael.

ATTENTION: BARGAIN HUNTERS! $39,950
Here's the lowest-priced home with pool in Sleepy Hollow! If you want a quality neighborhood at a bargain price, see this roomy, 3-bedroom, 2½-bath house wrapped around a most pleasant pool and patio. San Anselmo.

DINE IN STYLE $42,000
In the SEPARATE, FORMAL dining room of this well-designed and decorated 3-bedroom, 2-bath Glenwood ranch. Entertain grandly in the inviting, sunken family room with its own cozy fireplace, and come summer, you'll enjoy the pool that's an extra, added attraction. Safe, cul-de-sac street location. San Rafael.

LADY OF SPAIN $42,500

SOMETHING SPECIAL! $58,500
That's what we've found for you in convenient Dominican where you can see this 3-bedroom, 2½-bath traditional ranch with all the amenities, including a formal dining room. Well constructed, handsomely decorated, and the attractive landscaping includes a pool.

A SENSE OF WONDER $63,000
Engulfs you when confronted with the vistas from this house which boasts THE most outstanding site in Los Ranchitos. More than an acre and a half of privacy, level lawns, magnificent old oaks and very possibly the best view of the Civic Center in the bay area surrounds a traditional 3-bedroom, 2-bath ranch with warm paneling in most rooms, and large unfinished area for additional bedrooms, baths, playroom, or you name it. San Rafael.

ADULT ENTERTAINMENT $67,000
Sophisticated couples will like this contemporary home of fine design in Kent Woodlands with an awe-inspiring view. An Oriental influence can be seen in the use of shojis and grasscloth, and th attractive landscaping, which includes a pool, is completely sprinklered. 2 bedrooms, 2 baths, dining room. Kentfield.

CHANGING MOODS . . . $75,000
Of the spectacular view are an extra bonus of this 4-bedroom, 3-bath contemporary home — a hallmark of quality and elegance. The architect has provided for the careful pairing of house with site, and windows capture every nuance of bay and mountain vistas. A separate dining room is perfect for parties. Kentfield.

PRIZE WINNER! $75,000
This 5-bedroom, 3-bath Fairhills home won the AIA-Sunset Magazine award for architectural excellence in 1965, and now it's vacant and ready to move right into! The 2-story living room with its striking fireplace and view will excite you and so will the master suite with den, dressing room and 2nd fireplace. The lowest level is a children's dream with a vinyl-floored playroom that divides into 2 bedrooms. San Rafael.

CONGENIAL . . . $79,500
Habitat for the family that wants a flexible house on more than an acre of land in this desirable area where horses are as welcome as people. Added to the 3 bedrooms and 2 baths is the large guest house with rec. room, bedroom, bath and wet bar — perfect for teens or in-laws. The level yard is completely fenced with lawn, patios, orchard and pool, and one area is a logical setup for a children's riding ring. More than $100,000 has been spent on this property. San Rafael.

★ THE SMILING HOUSE

Really! . . . something about THIS house makes you feel so good you just can't help breaking into a big grin. Maybe it's because you can step THRU the shower or could it be TWO living rooms, one for the preacher (it's formal) and one where you can take your socks off (it's informal) or maybe it's because seated in the master bathroom you have a better view of Mt. Tamalpais than most people get from their living rooms! Sure it has bedrooms & baths and it is oak studded, and pool sited and just listed and all those things you always read about for $47,500 in the best part of Greenbrae. But come see it for yourself. 18 acres zoned and approved for mobile park. This choice wooded site has over 1000 feet of river frontage with an area suitable for a boat harbor. An old 22 room Victorian mansion with elevator, would be perfect for club house, plus restaurant and bar. A main street with utilities and sewer front the property. A small shopping center and a service station site has been planned on a portion of the 18 acres. Most of the costly engineering plans have already been done, and asking price of $250,000, makes this an exceptional buy.

EXECUTIVE CAR
'67 BUICK
ELECTRA 225
$4395

Here's an almost brand-new Electra 225 4-Dr. hardtop that our sales manager has driven during the past six months.

Astro Blue with contrasting blue custom vinyl top and absolutely all the Buick Electra luxury extras like power steering, power brakes, GM air conditioning, power windows, power seat, rear speaker, w/w tires, tinted glass, rear defroster, tilt steering wheel, trunk release.

Just over 7,000 miles, but this car still carries the new car Buick warranty of 50,000 miles of 5 years, due to the fact that the purchaser will be the first owner of record with General Motors.

Blue book for the used '67 Electra like this one is $4400, but we'll sell this one just like a new '68 off our floor with the full new car guarantee for only $4395.

Six In Running For Airport Job

Six finalists for the job of attendant at Marin County airport in Novato were interviewed yesterday by airport manager Francis E. Torr, but the appointment will be delayed until Monday.

"Several of them were so close that I'm going to consider them over the weekend before making the selection," said Torr. The six are all from Marin.

The airport attendant, who will be stationed at the airport to help Torr in daily operations, will draw a salary ranging between $510 and $619 per month. A total of 29 persons applied for the job.

BILLBOARDS FIGHT BACK

In her nationwide beautification campaign, Lady Bird Johnson has stressed cutting down on billboards. But a firm in Amarillo, Tex., aims at increasing the number of the huge signs, and the public's awareness of them. This clever answer is one of eight new signs to be displayed in the area in coming months. (AP Wirephoto)

Campus Banquet Features Awards

College of Marin students gave and received awards last night at the second semi-annual installation and awards banquet in the College Center at the Kentfield campus, which also saw seating of the college's spring semester student body officers.

Harry Lehman of Novato, president of the Associated Students, presented outgoing College of Marin Times editor Gerard Sirocky of Larkspur with a distinguished service certificate, $100 check, and a waste-basket embellished with newspaper clippings of the executive club council and Times staff football game. Sirocky then took the microphone and announced to the approximately 300 guests that the executive club council was presenting Lehmann with a lifetime membership in the Associated Students and a $100 check. The students also presented him with a crown inscribed "dynamic duo—me and myself" and a foot-long cigar, deeming him "king for a semester."

Special gold key awards were presented to Eileen O'Connell, club secretary, and Donna Leong, both of Fairfax. Donna also received two awards from the students "in appreciation for work on the college bulletin, the Beacon."

OFFICERS' KUDOS

Student officers receiving gold pin awards were: Mari Brennan of Greenbrae, head song leader; Dyanna Drummond of San Rafael, club secretary; Barbara Wallace of Fairfax, secretary; Patty Rohl of Mill Valley, head yell leader. Song leaders Robin Colthurst of Corte Madera and Shirley McClain of San Rafael received pins, as did yell leaders Doris Deedy of Ross and Mari Brennan.

Kim McDowell of Novato received a gold pin for work as publicity director of the Inter-Club Council, and Lynn Forrester of El Cerrito, for outstanding work as freshman women's representative. Harry Gilbert of San Anselmo was honored for extra efforts as spirit and athletics commissioner.

Club chairmen receiving awards were: Mark Johnson of Fairfax, international relations; Stephen Jacob of Novato, anagainst war; Ray Gilbert of Novato, nursing. Dan Lochmann of Tiburon, Newman; Jim Andrews of Kentfield, naturalist; Rick Closson of San Rafael, bridge; Eileen O'Connell of Kentfield, Marin rallies; Bill Burns of Mill Valley, students against war; Ray Gilbert of Novato, Tars service; Candy Cowan of San Anselmo, Mariners service; Rick Laskey of San Rafael, ski; Lynn Griffith of Mill Valley, scuba; Tom Holcomb of Point Reyes Station, bachelors, and John Ruchenski of Ross, College Center commissioner.

'CONTROVERSY' AWARD

A special award was presented by Lehmann to Jon Turner of Marin City for continuing the "Controversy" series, and for outstanding communications work as executive officer in the Black Student Union.

Non-student awards were presented to Theodore C. Wellman of Kentfield, president of the College of Marin Foundation; Mrs. Maureen Yuill of San Rafael, ASCOM bookkeeper; Mrs. Dorothy Flynn of Greenbrae and Larry Schuster of Mill Valley, student bookstore, and Mrs. Sue Kopf of Kentfield, student advisor secretary.

John Grey of San Anselmo, received a special certificate of appreciation for coordinating the Christmas food drive.

SCHOLARS' PINS

Don Palmer of the college faculty presented gold pins to members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma California Junior College Honor Scholarship Society. Those receiving pins were:

SAN RAFAEL: Patricia Kolitsch, Michael McLaughlin, Karen Traverso, Renee Burton, Violet Arbas, Janice Carnell, Andy Chambers, Diana Dalton, Kathleen Epidendio, Dean Ferrandini, Ruth Hutchinson, Steve Johannesen, Bonnie Lowrie, Harold Persily, Christine Sovale, Kathy Sosic, Roberta Weiss, Myra Glew, Ed Eazzano, Linda Mead, Linda Rolmes, Darrel Seatt.

NOVATO: James Sanders, Angela Carbone, Paul Martinovich, Lavra Ferguson, Sharon Springborn, Valerie Witzel, Donna Hamilton, and Harry Lehmann.

SAN ANSELMO: Kenneth Mandel, Darrell Scott, Lawrence Werbelow, Alan Hadley, Robert Harrison, Ranald Bruce, Henry Davalos, Betty Huddleston, Ann Kilty, William Luft, Ann McCarthy, and Brenda Retke.

CORTE MADERA: Silvia Hawley, Sherrill Bloomquist and Cheryl Redding.

KENTFIELD: Ilene Storace, Hao-Kuang Sun, Juliana Bonicalzi, Denice Daddario, Anne Page, William Stepp, and Ann McLean.

MILL VALLEY: Theodore Anthony, Donald Delnicki, Sylvia Dunn, Duane Friesen, Brian Garoutte, Cleo Hendricks, Vickie Hoetger, Kent Marshall, Joan Nettro, Judity Stuber, Ernest Silva and Patricia Yu.

LARKSPUR: Michele Pederson, Gerard Sirocky and Lois Rand.

Ann Adrian, Sausalito; Jerry Warden, Jacobo Feinzilberg, and Roy Wolford, all of Fairfax; Jon Elkin, Robert Cole, Rita Mantegani and Rudolph Mappus, all of Tiburon.

Elaine Edwards, Vacaville; Michael Kabour, San Francisco; Jerry Kelly, Oakland; Mary Smith, San Quentin; Bonard Willson, Lagunitas; and Susan Woodbury, Greenbrae.

Student Crowding, Discipline On Agenda

The San Rafael Board of Education will continue consideration of how to deal with increasing student population at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the library of Santa Venetia School, 177 North San Pedro Road.

Also on the agenda is expected approval of board policy authorizing suspension of any student under the influence of any drug, or for having drugs in his possession.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

The Underfed Individual Can Feed On His Own Fat, Flesh

VAN DELLEN

Malnutrition always leads to cannibalism, but not the type practiced by African natives or the wild men of Borneo. The body cannibalizes its own flesh whenever an inadequate diet is consumed. Fatty deposits under the skin disappear first, followed by accumulations in the deeper structures.

All of us have seen pictures of examples of extreme weight loss among concentration camp inmates. They are apathetic, emaciated living skeletons with sunken eyeballs and prominent cheekbones.

But the picture could be duplicated in many of our hospitals and nursing homes.

THE MAJORITY are disabled by arthritis, heart disease, stroke, poor circulation, senility, or neurological disorders such as multiple sclerosis. These patients usually have a normal digestive system and food is available.

Why are they malnourished? In some instances, the institution is at fault. The staff lacks enthusiasm and imagination and does not, or cannot, give each patient individual attention.

All too often, the responsibility lies with the patient. He has never developed good eating habits and is too sick or old to change.

OTHERS HAVE no appetite or are indifferent to their nutritional status. Some offer a tremendous resistance to food, varying from simple obstinacy to open hostility; there are psychiatric reasons behind this type behavior.

Many would improve dramatically on a high caloric diet containing ample butter, cream, cheese, bacon, and other foods rich in nutritional value. This plan must be started gradually and supplemented with intravenous feedings, mainly of dextrose.

NOW AND THEN tube feeding is needed. A hormone such as Anavar may be used to promote weight gain in some.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to the I-J.)

BITES TONGUE

Mrs. I. writes: My normal, healthy, happy 3-year-old bites her tongue when she eats. Sometimes the tongue bleeds. What can be done to prevent this mishap?

REPLY

Nothing, provided her tongue and teeth are normal in size and alignment. Learning to eat properly takes time, and some youngsters are slower than others in mastering the process.

RHEUMATIC FEVER

A mother writes: Does a sore throat always precede an attack of rheumatic fever?

REPLY

Not always. The attack may be preceded by scarlet fever or a strep infection such as impetigo. In some instances, the victim does not recall being ill prior to the onset of rheumatic fever. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on this condition.

EYES LOSE SPARKLE

T. E. writes: What makes the eys of old people look faded?

REPLY

Eyes lose their sparkle for many reasons. The transparency of the visual parts is lost and the lids tend to droop. In addition, the zest for living may be diminished.

HEART MURMURS

C. E. W. writes: Could heart murmurs develop in a man of 60 who never had them before?

REPLY

Yes, as a result of high blood pressure, enlargement of the heart, anemia, or arteriosclerosis.

TABOO IN PHLEBITIS

H. T. writes: Is massage helpful in phlebitis?

REPLY

No, massage is dangerous because it might free a piece of clot in the vein.

NAIL STUDY

Mrs. B. T. writes: Why does the doctor always look at my nails when I visit him for a checkup?

REPLY

Nail changes occur in a variety of local and generalized diseases.

STOMACH FAILING AT 50

P. T. writes: What causes the stomach to go to pot in a 50-year-old man who is not overweight?

REPLY

Loss of muscle tone and redistribution of the fat deposits.

While 'Frisco' Sneers, Oakland Goes Big League

SAN FRANCISCANS FREQUENTLY tend to think of themselves as very cosmopolitan and very sophisticated.

But they are often in fact quite the opposite.

Consider a San Francisco sophisticate's view of Oakland. What's-his-name, the best-known columnist in that San Francisco newspaper which immodestly calls itself "The Voice of the West," delights his pseudo-sophisticate San Francisco readers with occasional denigrations of Oakland.

Oakland cultural events are the subject of special derrogation. What's-his-name seemingly revels in demeaning the Oakland Symphony in his column.

Fact is, Oakland has a symphony this year. San Francisco does not; at least not so far.

It was until very recently fashionable for San Francisco pseudo-sophisticates to look down their noses at the Oakland Raiders professional football team.

That stopped rather abruptly this season as the Raiders scared the daylights out of the '49ers in a pre-season game. The Raiders wound up winning 13 games this season — more than the '49ers have won in two seasons put together in recent years. The Raiders won their division championship, something the '49ers have never done in their 20-year history.

The Raiders went on to win their league championship, decisively. The '49ers have yet to work their way into a league championship game.

The doughty, plucky Raiders may well give the awesome Green Bay Packers a run for their money in the forthcoming interleague playoff.

OAKLAND'S SUPPORT of professional sports does not end with the Raiders. Oakland has its own American Basketball League team, the Oaks, and the San Francisco Warriors of the National Basketball Association have seen fit to play a good part of their 1967-68 "home game" schedule in Oakland, in preference to San Francisco.

San Francisco's National Hockey League team, the Seals, pulled up stakes and moved its home to Oakland. Now they are the Oakland Seals.

In professional soccer's first season last year, the Oakland Clippers acquitted themselves quite creditably. San Francisco's Golden Gate Gales did not do well at all.

This year, Oakland will have its own American League baseball team with the former Kansas City franchise.

There is nothing "bush league" about Oakland's support of big-time professional athletics.

A LEADING SPORTS COLUMNIST for that other San Francisco newspaper, which immodestly describes itself as "The Monarch of the Dailies," enjoys poking fun at the ban on the sale of alcoholic beverages at Oakland's beautiful new Coliseum.

Actually, this is benefitting Oakland probably far more than San Franciscans would like to believe.

It is commonly heard that the reason the '49ers drew only about half as many people to their home games this season as did the Raiders was plainly and simply a matter of the won-lost records of the teams. This is sometimes expanded to include a need for some exciting new players on the '49ers team. Sometimes Kezar Stadium's limitations are blamed.

Those of us who have sat in a San Francisco crowd — which suffered from too much to drink — have a different view. We don't like to watch '49er games (win or lose) in person because of the behavior of the San Franciscans we find ourselves sitting among.

After drinking too much they become vulgar, profane, obscene and generally obnoxious. It isn't a place one wants to take his wife and family. And even if you go "stag," who wants to have food, drink and sometimes worse slopped down his back from the drunks sitting in the next row up?

No, thanks. Give us Oakland Coliseum's atmosphere. It is not above criticism at times. But at worst it is the lesser of two evils by a wide margin.

OAKLAND'S INTERNATIONAL Airport comes in for jibes too.

Like the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, it was built before a crisis.

Further like the Richmond-San Rafael Bridge, there is a need for it. The rapidly increasing traffic it carries is proof of that.

Getting in and out of Oakland Airport from Marin is infinitely easier than San Francisco International. Parking charges are far less exhorbitant. The distance from where you park your car to where you take or meet your plane is considerably shorter in Oakland, although the growth in usage of Oakland Airport already has added to the average distance and decreased the convenience a bit.

MANY SAN FRANCISCANS have a bad case of Pharisaism.

If it persists, the rest of us will find ourselves preferring increasingly the attractions of Oakland, especially in professional sports.

Tonkin Gulf Incidents Get Belated Airing

By JOHN A. GOLDSMITH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Foreign Relations Committee, source for much of the criticism of President Johnson's Vietnam policies, could stir up new election-year problems for the president with its study of the 1964 incidents in Tonkin Gulf.

The issue, put simply, is one of credibility: Did the Johnson administration misrepresent reported attacks on the U. S. destroyers Maddox and Turner Joy in order to extract from Congress the Tonkin Gulf resolutions? That resolution became the prime authority for the U. S. buildup in Vietnam.

Committee staff members are examining logs of the two destroyers which were harassed in the Gulf by Communist torpedo boats on Aug. 2 and 4, 1964. Chairman J. William Fulbright, D-Ark., has asked for a staff report after Congress reconvenes Jan. 15.

IF, AS EXPECTED, the staff report raises questions about the Pentagon's account of the attack — particularly the night attack of Aug. 4 — that would fit nicely into GOP charges of a Johnson administration "credibility gap."

If the committee should seriously challenge the administration's account it could answer a Republican campaign question which has so far proved perplexing: How to criticize President Johnson for the Vietnam dilemma without also criticizing former Presidents Dwight D. Eisenhower and John F. Kennedy and seeming to downgrade the sacrifice of Americans who are dying there.

The Pentagon, which supplied the ships' logs to the committee, has issued an illustrated statement designed to show the authenticity of the attacks. On his part, Fulbright has publicized, with the State Department's permission, 15-months-old testimony by Asst. Secretary William P. Bundy stating that "contingent drafts" of a congressional Southeast Asia resolution were prepared in the department before the attacks on U. S. warships.

After the second of the two incidents — and to a large measure because of it — Congress approved the final draft of the resolution which authorized the president to take necessary steps to repel Communist aggression in the area.

A NUMBER of uncertainties will make it difficult to establish now just what happened to the two U. S. destroyers. The committee's interest has been whetted by recent statements attributed indirectly to a crew member that torpedos were not fired at the ships in the night attack.

Destroyermen who have experienced night actions know well the confusion which can develop, even in an era of radar and of voice communication between ships. Honest arguments have taken place in the past, for example, about whether torpedoes did — or did not — pass close to a fast moving destroyer.

Even if inaccuracies can now be proved, there would still be a question of whether anyone intentionally distorted the incidents which prompted President Johnson to retaliate with raids on Hanoi's torpedo boat bases.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Questions By Which To Rate Legislator

Editor, Independent-Journal:

Some amount of space is being devoted in your paper to the record of our assemblyman in Sacramento and I would like to add a few thoughts of my own and ask a few questions. In attempting to evaluate job performance of any public servant it is usually desirable to establish meaningful criteria or guide lines. In my mind the questions to be asked and answered by any public servant working for or against any particular legislative proposal are: Does this legislation tend to accomplish the following:

1. Maintain a high standard of constitutional government as conceived by our forefather and based upon strong moral principles?

2. Will it strengthen the responsibility of the individual for his actions or will it make him more subservient to bureaucratic control by increasingly big government?

3. Will it strengthen and help perpetuate our free enterprise system or will it help to further strangle same?

4. Will it strengthen fiscal responsibility?

5. Will it help to preserve and protect local control?

On the basis of these simple criteria I am wondering just how high our assemblyman would score? And should we be satisfied with quantity and further oppression; or can we ask for and get a larger measure of quality based upon freedom of the individual to determine his own destiny? Or are there other, more meaningful criteria that I have somehow overlooked?

This Reader No Admirer Of Bagley

Editor, Independent-Journal:

What an effusive editorial you accorded William T. Bagley, December 30, 1967!

Bagley can never hope to attain the title of statesman and respect of his constitutents when he does not arise above "petty politics and short-sighted self-interest," to quote your editorial. . .

"Bags" has done nothing for GOP unity and with his probable support of Rockefeller as 1968 presidential candidate he can hardly shout "extremist" against Rockefeller opposition.

Bill Bagley has thoroughly demonstrated that he wants to be nothing but controversial, sensational and opportunist!

GOLDEN GATE VIEW

Second Deck Not Dead As Board Seeks Power

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

The proposal for a second deck on the Golden Gate Bridge will be brought back to life this year by the "defection" of at least three San Francisco directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District.

This is the prediction of one of the seven San Francisco directors who joined in a 9-4 vote on Nov. 24 to bury the proposed second deck. He made the prediction after the bridge board voted unanimously last week to seek legislation to broader its powers so the district can study and even operate "all forms" of transportation.

ASKED TO EXPLAIN the switch, the San Francisco director told this reporter that the majority of the directors "are just playing along until there's a study of ferries — which they will be sure they interpret to mean there's a need to begin immediate construction of a second deck. They'll reach that conclusion regardless of what any study says," he said.

He named directors William Moskovitz, Dan E. London and Ben K. Lerer as the first directors he expects to "defect" from the 9-4 vote of November. All three previoulsy were outspoken advocates of a second deck, he noted.

He did not indicate which other directors he had in mind when he said "others may have a change of mind, too."

The switch of the three directors alone would give the pro-second deck forces seven votes. The necessary eighth vote could come from Edwin M. Fraser of Del Norte County, the only director who missed the November vote.

Fraser, because he lives so far away, attends few meetings. Oddly, both proponents and opponents of a second deck have claimed he supports them—which even on the bridge board seems unlikely.

But before the "defection" occurs, the cynical San Francisco director predicted, "the majority of teh board will let the legislature expand the district's power and will let a ferry study be made — then the big surprise will come."

A LESS CYNICAL observer could say the bridge district directors are sincere in their support of new powers as a means to keep themselves in business after 1971 — when the legislature could dissolve the profit-making district.

But Assemblyman William T. Bagley, R-San Rafael, cautioned this week that expansion of the district's power probably would not be enough to protect its revenue from "raids" by other state agencies. Some new "mechanism" needs to be found to keep the revenue under local control, he said.

He conceded he saw no prospect of creating a new "mechanism" this year, but said as 1971 nears "this will become more critical."

AFFAIRS OF STATE

State Withholding Tax Creeps Ever Nearer

By HENRY C. MacARTHUR

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — After a good many years of quibble concerning imposition of a withholding tax on wages for paying state income tax, it's beginning to look like 1968 may be the year when the California public gets this additional tap on the salary check.

Depite voluble opposition to this form of collecting taxes by Gov. Ronald Reagan, forces sponsoring the withholding system are growing. Speaker of the House Jesse M. Uuruh, D-Los Angeles, the acknowledged leader of Reagan's opposition, says there will be no tax reform without a withholding tax.

For this, Reagan said it was arrogant of the speaker to say withholding is the price of getting some legislation that is good for the people of California.

Out of such bickering, laws stand or fall — not upon their merits, but upon a determination of who has the most muscle.

In the present instance, the question of muscle is somewhat precarious, in that Reagan has his veto power and Unruh has his majority in the Assembly, so the upshot of the issue, which is bound to be one of the leading controversies of the 1968 session, easily could be a compromise.

The so-called will of the people won't have a whole lot to do with whether the legislature passes the withholding provision.

INSIDE WASHINGTON

Anti-Thieu Campaign Recalls Attack On Diem

By PAUL SCOTT

WASHINGTON — North Vietnam's new strategy is designed to help history repeat it self in South Vietnam.

A diplomatic-military-propaganda offensive similar to the one that led to the overthrow of the pro-American government of President Ngo Dinh Diem in 1963 is being launched by Hanoi against President Nguyen Van Thieu's government.

The objective is to topple Thieu and replace his government with a coalition regime including the Communists.

This is the heart of the warning U.S. intelligence officials have prepared for President Johnson and his Vietnam advisers.

They envision a massive terror campaign aimed at disrupting Saigon and other major South Vietnamese cities by demonstrations, street fighting, strikes, bombings of public facilities, and assassinations.

The terror campaign will be closely linked with a worldwide propaganda drive to discredit President Thieu and his newly elected government. The Communists' propaganda theme will be that peace will come to South Vietnam once Thieu is ousted and a coalition government formed with the Viet Cong.

On Dec. 20, 1960, the National Liberation Front was founded by issuing a 14-point "Peace Program," which contained a call for the ouster of President Ngo Dinh Diem.

Eight days after Diem was overthrown on Nov. 1, 1963, the central committee of the National Liberation Front decided to ask for a cease-fire and to enter negotiations with those factions that overthrew Diem.

This decision was ratified by NLF's second congress in January 1964, but the ruling South Vietnamese military junta opposed negotiations and President Johnson supported this decision.

NLF'S third congress, held in August 1967 somewhere in North Vietnam, revised and adopted the new 14-point Peace program."

Bouquets And Brickbat

BRICKBAT to State Sen. John F. McCarthy for ill-timed announcement that he may again introduce a bill for a Tiburon-San Francisco Bridge. The commute traffic problem is muddy enough without reviving that proposal, which was unacceptable to Marinites previously.

BOUQUET to Charles F. Pendleton for six years of dedicated effort as a Corte Madera town councilman, and for his many other civic activities. "Chuck" will be missed also at Radio KTIM, where he has long been a fixture. We wish him success in his new work with a Hollywood talent agency.

BOUQUET to the Marin Power Squadron for expanding its free boating safety education classes to Novato.

BOUQUET to the Marin County Labor Council for its move to get foundation funds to underwrite bus service for Marin City students attending Tamalpais High School. The council is doing something about a problem the high school district has failed to solve.

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

FAMILY LIFE NEEDS YOUR HELP

Most of the 48 million families in the United States deserve more credit than they generally receive. But certain warning signals should not be ignored.

For example, young persons under 18 account for about half the arrests each year for serious offenses. (Often there is a direct relationship between crime and the breakdown of family life.)

Other factors contributing to the problem are divorce, tension and neglect in one family after another.

In many cases, outside help is urgently needed. Ultimately, though, each family must recognize its responsibility to become in fact the sound basic unit of society that God intends it to be.

Whatever you do, as a parent, son or daughter, to strengthen the bonds of affection and understanding in family life is sure to pay off in ways that reach far beyond your home.

"Admonish the idle, encourage the faint-hearted, help the weak, be patient with them all."

(1 Thesalonians 5:14)

Help all of us to strengthen our family ties, Lord, and work for a better world.

TRY AND STOP ME

By BENNETT CERF

A SELF-MADE business tycoon, born and raised in the heart of Manhattan, was so impressed with Buck Duke's dictum ("a kid born in the country can learn in six months everything a city boy will ever know — but a city boy can never, never learn what a country kid knows at the age of 10") that he sent his young son to spend the summer vacation working on a farm upstate. Early in August, he visited the farm himself to find out how his boy was faring. "Middling good," nodded the old farmer. "In fact, he's doin' a durn sight better'n I expected. For instance he already speaks cow language —but he ain't quite learned yet how to think like a cow."

An inveterate pickpocket finally breathed his last, and prostrated himself before St. Peter, craving admission through the Pearly Gates. St. Peter heard him through courteously, but then decreed, "It's Hades for you, my boy — and meanwhile, kindly give me back my watch."

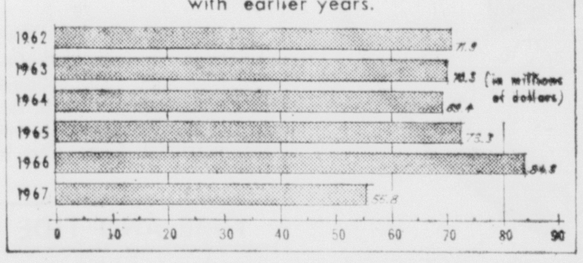
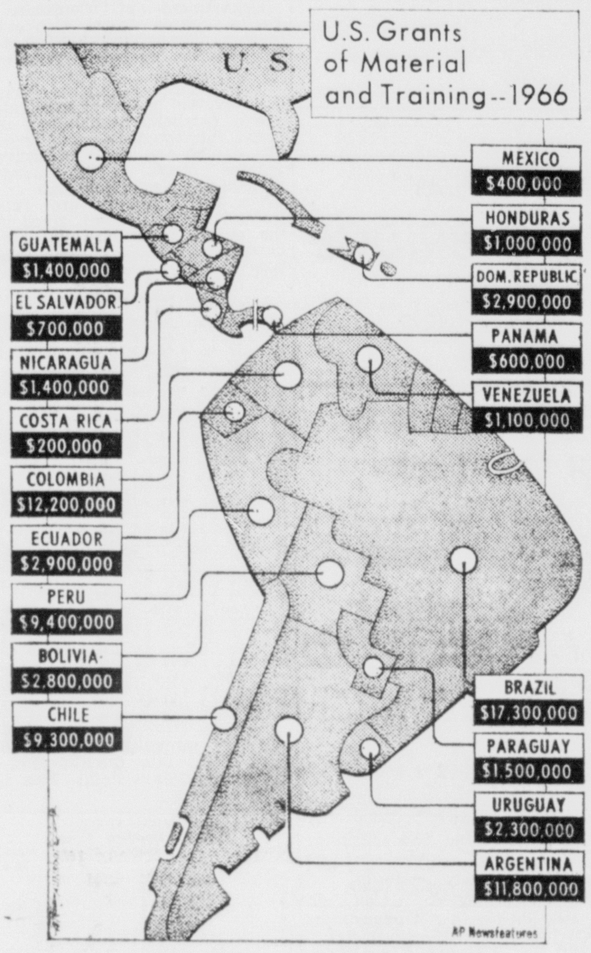
LATIN AMERICAN MILITARY AID

U.S. Military Assistance Grants

An $85 million ceiling was established by Congress in 1966 for U.S. government-furnished military equipment to Latin America excluding training. The 1967 program represents a substantial decrease compared with earlier years.





IS IT A RACE?

Latin Arms Costs Among World's Least

By BEN F. MEYER

WASHINGTON (AP) — It all started in World War II when Axis submarines and gunboats were blasting Allied shipping off the coasts of Latin America.

Washington hastily granted $400 million worth of arms to Latin America under the lend-lease program.

Now Latin America's purchases of arms have become a red hot issue in that area, as well as in Washington.

A debate rages whether there is an arms race in Latin America and if so, what should be done about it.

"One reason for the jolting concern over arms purchases is the astounding amount of war materiel in the United Arab Republic, revealed by recent events in the Middle East," says Covey T. Oliver, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs.

Figures suggest that of all the major developing areas of the world, Latin America's expenditures on defense are the lowest. U.S. officials say the figure on military outlays is 1.75 per cent of the area's gross national product, against 7.45 per cent for the Middle East, 4.84 for Asia, 4.52 for North Africa. Only the African area below the Sahara has a lower figure — 1.67 per cent.

Since the World War II flurry of arms aid to Latin America, the yearly total of grants and sales of military equipment to that area by the United States has ranged from about one-half million dollars in 1952 to a current rate of approximately $95 million.

In recent years about 90 per cent of U.S. sales have gone to NATO allies and Japan, Australia and New Zealand, and 10 per cent to Latin America, Africa and Asia.

Nicholas deB. Katzenbach, undersecretary of state, discussed the arms issue recently:

"One side says we should have nothing to do with providing and selling arms — especially in the less developed countries. In the abstract that makes sense. In the real world it would be dangerous to our national objectives."

Communist Cuba, he added, "continues to export revolution and guerrilla warfare to Guatemala, Venezuela, Colombia and Bolivia." Katzenbach said that "to ignore or seek to rationalize away such threats to the peace would in my opinion, constitute an irresponsible interpretation of our long-range national interests."

Washington's policy on military expenditures by Latin America is pegged to the theory that it should be aimed at meeting internal disorders and fighting guerrilla and other subversive activity.

But Oliver says, "We are often faced with unhappy options. We can suggest a rule of reason, but we cannot dictate the defense requirements of another country. If we refuse to cooperate (on requests for purchase of military equipment) the countries concerned may decide that their replacement needs require that they buy an alternative aircraft, perhaps in Western Europe, at an even higher cost to their development efforts. Introduction of such sophisticated aircraft into the region could well escalate arms spending to a new and much higher level."

It noted that a few years ago Argentina bought an outmoded aircraft carrier from Great Britain. Shortly afterward, Brazil did the same thing. The Pentagon authorized the sale of 50 Vulcan A-4b jets, three destroyers and 60 M-41 tanks to Argentina, and shortly afterward Chile purchased 21 British Hawker Hunter jets.

These are cases cited as evidences of an arms race, whereas a purchase of 74 Saberjet fighters from West Germany by oil-rich Venezuela was not.

This Week In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

The United States would go "any where . . . any time" to talk about peace in Vietnam, President Johnson has repeatedly declared.

North Vietnam apparently decided to see if the President was serious and peace proposals pushed the war's "hot pursuit" issue to the background during the week.

The administration has contended that North Vietnam had not said it would definitely come to the negotiating table even if U.S. forces stopped bombing the North. This week they did, Secretary of State Dean Rusk admitted, and the change apparently involved one little word.

The official word from Hanoi was that North Vietnam "will" hold peace talks if the United States stops the bombing and "other acts of war." Previously, Rusk said, Hanoi had been using the word "could" to indicate the possibility of talks after a halt in bombing.

As for acting on the North Vietnamese overture, Rusk said the United States was making behind-the-scenes efforts to determine if the statements were a propaganda ploy or a sincere effort for peace.

Rusk played down the "hot pursuit" issue, in which the United States is seeking approval from Cambodia and Laos for its forces to chase Communist units into those countries during battle in the hopes of wiping them out. However, it was announced Ambassador Chester W. Bowles would go to Cambodia to talk with Prince Norodom Sihanouk about his statements that he was amenable to such pursuit across his country's border.

On the war front, a series of hot clashes and North Vietnamese attacks on U.S. bases during the week left almost 200 Americans dead and more than 400 wounded.

Around The World; Around The Clock:

Moscow: The Soviet Union claimed U.S. bombs had "seriously damaged" one of its ships in the North Vietnam harbor of Haiphong, handed Secretary of State Dean Rusk a stiff note of protest and said it would "take measures to insure the safety of Soviet vessels sailing for" North Vietnamese ports.

Washington: Sen. Eugene J. McCarthy, D-Minn., announced he would take his campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination into New Hampshire and challenge President Johnson as a write-in candidate in the election March 12. McCarthy, who is opposed to Johnson's Vietnam policy, has already said he would enter the primaries of four other states.

Cape Town, South Africe: Dr. Christian Barnard led a South African medical team in its second transplant of a human heart, this one on dentist Philip Blaiberg, 58, who received the heart of a 24-year old mixed-blood man who died of a stroke.

Washington: President Johnson signed a bill that will increase Social Security benefits by at least 13 per cent for 24 million Americans and increase the amount withheld for Social Security to pay for the increase.

Washington: President Johnson, in an effort to decrease the country's deficit of payments, imposed restrictions on most direct investments abroad by American corporations and said he would consider proposing legislation designed to make travel abroad more costly to Americans by imposing a tax that might force them to pay as much as $8 a day for the privilege.

OLD, NEW ISSUES

Legislative Fights Ahead

By JERRY RANKIN

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Proposals to subdue the ferment on state college and university campuses will find strong bipartisan support during the 1968 legislative session.

A strong feeling for cracking down hard on students and faculty involved in unruly demonstrations runs through replies from the annual Associated Press poll of California lawmakers.

Typical of the response is the one from a Republican senator who asked not to be identified, but who demanded: "Expel, dismiss, suspend—at once, and drastically."

The poll, and statements by Gov. Ronald Reagan, also make clear that legislators this year will face proposals dealing with the usual hodge-podge of "secondary" issues—which often produce the hottest debate of the session. Laws are expected to be proposed on pornography, drunken driving, smog, governmental reorganization, open housing and in many other fields.

The poll also indicates that one of the most controversial topics in legislative chambers early in this decade — repeal of capital punishment — no longer is a serious issue. Asked if they favored abolishing the gas chamber, 21 lawmakers said they did and 40 voted against it. But, when asked if they thought such a proposal could pass, none said it would and 47 predicted failure.

On the campus turmoil, the legislators were asked if they would "favor legislation to crack down on demonstrations" at the colleges and University of California. Twenty-seven, including 17 Republicans and 10 Democrats, said they favored it, while 19 were opposed, including 13 Democrats and 6 Republicans.

Those favoring legislation made clear they want not only student troublemakers dealt with, but as one Republican assemblyman put it, "Get rid of the teachers promoting the problems." The call for "stricter discipline for students and faculty" rang throughout the replies.

Some of those who registered opposition did so because, in the words of a Democrat assemblyman, "We have all the laws we need." Many demanded that present rules to penalize rowdy behavior be rigidly enforced.

Republican Assembly Minority Leader Robert T. Monagan of Tracy said he objects to new legislation against "demonstrations if they don't interfere with other school activity and do not destroy property or the function of the university or college. Otherwise, expel students and throw nonstudents in jail."

ROBERT T. MONAGAN
'Expel unruly students'

A solid core, although a minority, exists in opposition to any new legislation. One liberal Democratic assemblyman spoke for this viewpoint, saying the demonstrations are "a phony issue. No evidence that new legislation is needed . . . We need firm hands, not more laws."

On another education issue, the two parties remained sharply split on the tuition proposal for higher education which Governor Reagan will demand again from UC regents and legislators, for the college system.

Twenty Republicans and six Democrats said they favor imposing tuition on California students for the first time, while 24 Democrats and only one Republican opposed it. As in 1967, this is expected to be a year-long topic of debate.

When it comes to the state's controversial Rumford open housing law, a majority of those responding said it shouldn't be repealed. That vote was 29-21, although some of those who opposed outright repeal favored modification, and legislation to do this is certain to be introduced.

However, only two lawmakers thought the law will be repealed this year, while 41 predicted failure for outright repeal.

Among other issues expected to stir controversy:

Further attempts to tighten antismog laws, already tougher than federal standards.

Reagan's request that the fledgling anti-drunken driving law be expanded to make convictions easier.

Renewed attempts to toughen the law against pornography. The governor's legislation to do this was defeated in 1967, but will be introduced again. Observers expect the election year to heighten chances that some alteration of the law will get through

How far the state should go in aiding establishment of local rapid transit systems, and exactly what it can do to help the San Francisco Bay Area system out of a financial pickle.

1967 Saw Ups, Downs On Pollution

By SCIENCE SERVICE

The year 1967 saw a slight but significant escalation in the struggle of man versus nature — in man's fight to find clean sources of water, to lessen water and air pollution, to keep certain wild creatures alive, and special wooded, marshy and rocky areas of the natural world free from civilization.

One resource, essential to life itself — water — made news both in a hopeful and in a disappointing way.

Late in May nearly 5,000 delegates from some 90 nations met in Washington, D. C., at a Water for Peace Conference, bent on reassessing the amount of fresh water in the world, discussing methods of conserving it and abating water pollution.

In the same month, U.S. support of the 95-nation, 10-year program, International Hydrological Decade, was slashed, first by the House of Representatives, then by the Senate.

Ultraviolet spectroscopy showed that Lake Ontario may be even more polluted than dying Lake Erie, and Lake Michian is also becoming a murky cesspool. A $10 million program was proposed to study the Lake Michigan alewife which littered the water and shores with hundreds of tons of carcasses in late summer.

Good news broke that populations of the lamprey eel, once the ogre of the Great Lakes, were lessened by nearly 97 per cent, thanks to chemical warfare.

Water pollution created unprecedented problems in the ocean when some 118,600 tons of raw petroleum washed upon British and French shores as the oil tanker Torrey Canyon broke over a submerged rock near Lands End. Soon after, a submerged oil tanker, sunk during World War II, began spewing up oil that threatened the U. S. eastern coast. An oil pollution study was ordered by President Johnson.

Several bright events helped the water situation — the five-year drought of the Northeast was broken by heavy rains, as was the five-year Everglades drought which, along with engineering projects, had gravely endangered many rare species of wildlife. The year saw sharp increases in studies of weather modification, in and out of the government. Although no national standards were set, 22 states adopted some form of regulation of weather modification activities.

Attempts were made to halt air pollution with experimental incinerators, conversion of coal to gas, and reassessment of electric cars, but the air remained murky and toxic — the major question being how much power the federal government should have to force urban and industrial polluters to spend their share of the estimated $3 billion per year needed to clean the American air.

A sea current more than twice the volume of the Gulf Stream was discovered flowing past the southern tip of South America. Strong new evidence from many studies favored the theory of continental drift — stating that ocean floors are slowly welling up in mid-ocean ridges and flowing east and west, forcing continents apart.

An eruption of Hawaii's Kilauea volcano, though not predicted exactly, occurred as expected and closer tabs on earthquake tremors along the western U. S. coast have kept geologists alert for the next earthquake.

An absence of news made news, as the longest period of time elapsed without a major earthquake occurring in the United States — the last big quake struck Anchorage, Alaska, March 1964.

New frontiers continued to be opened in the world's icy regions — in the Arctic where U. S. icebreakers started the first circumnavigation of the Arctic Ocean and collected new data, in spite of having to turn back from wind-packed ice on the Soviet side. In the tenth consecutive year of Antarctic summer research, 150 American scientists began mapping the last unexplored region of that continent and drilling a core through thousands of feet of the ice cap.

One cause for celebration in man's attempt to conserve wildlife is the highest count yet taken of the one remaining flock of whooping cranes — now numbering 47 wild birds flying between Canada and Texas, and 12 in captivity — 59 in all.

Medi-Cal Chief Target In Capitol

State's Demos, GOP Agree Cuts Needed, But How?

By KEN GREEN
Associated Press Writer

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Legislators — both Republicans and Democrats — and the Reagan administration are determined to do something about Medi-Cal this year.

Their common goal: To keep rising costs in the state's program of free health care for the poor from mushrooming beyond the state's ability to pay for it.

But how to do that is a major point of dispute between Republican Gov. Ronald Reagan and legislative Democrats, who control the Assembly 42-38 and have a 20-20 standoff with Republicans in the Senate.

SPENCER WILLIAMS
Seeks reins for Reagan

Reagan again will ask the legislature to give his administrators more direct control over the program, including the ability to cut some of the "fringe" health services provided to the needy for free, says Spencer Williams, Reagan's health and welfare chief.

Assembly Democrats say they will fight to continue full Medi-Cal benefits to the estimated 1.5 million persons eligible for the program. They contend that the Medi-Cal financial crisis — if there is one — is caused by "wasteful and incompetent management" by Reagan and Williams and their aides.

Right now, a special legislative committee composed of four Republicans and four Democrats is trying to determine the exact financial position of Medi-Cal — whether it faces a deficit this year and how much.

Their report is due Jan. 31.

Confident the program is in real trouble, the Reagan administration continues to search for ways to cut expenses and costs.

A decision will be made within the next few weeks on whether to establish a strict schedule of doctor's fees under Medi-Cal, Williams said. The administration has opposed a schedule up to now.

The immediate goal is to "minimize the cost of administration so as to put a maximum amount of money into actual services. This approach is important to get public confidence," Williams said in an interview.

The real problem, Reagan contends, is that something basically is wrong with Medi-Cal.

"The problem — if there was no deficit — the problem is that just within the budget this program each year is increasing faster than the state revenues can keep up with, at a rate of somewhere around 50 per cent a year," Reagan said recently. "And we have an emergency problem . . ."

In a nutshell, Reagan believes the state will have to raise taxes every year just to keep up with Medi-Cal unless something is done.

Assemblyman Winfield A. Shoemaker of Lompoc, chairman of the Assembly Democratic Caucus, reiterated the program is intended to "raise the level of care of individuals to that of the mainstream of U.S. medicine."

But Williams said the Reagan administration will "continue to examine the entire concept to see if the mainstream really is the best way."

Legislators are in almost unanimous agreement that some new controls are needed in the program to keep it within the state's ability to finance it.

Typical of Democratic views on Medi-Cal is the response of Sen. George Moscone of San Francisco to an Associated Press poll: "I believe there can be a tightening of the program without a reduction of services."

Most Republicans support Reagan's contention that he needs more flexibility in administering the program.

A Republican leader suggested, "The whole program ought to be redrafted."

Reagan tried to impose cuts in Medi-Cal "fringe" services last August, but this was thwarted by the State Supreme Court which said the Governor overstepped his legal authority.

WINFIELD A. SHOEMAKER
Urges 'mainstream' aid

JESSE M. UNRUH
Raps Reagan strategy

Reagan then unsuccessfully sought legislative authorization, during a special session late last year, to go ahead with many of the cuts.

In a debate that went to the core of philosophical differences, Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, D-Inglewood, angrily declared that Medi-Cal was "threatened with destruction by an indifferent and unsympathetic administration."

Unruh and others were particularly ired by Reagan's special television report on the Medi-Cal controversy.

The governor held up a Medi-Cal membership card and told the state's working men and women that their taxes were financing better health care for the poor than they could afford for themselves and their own families. Most recipients are on welfare.

Reagan was asked in December about charges that this was an attempt to "set class against class by waving that card around as you did."

Reagan replied that his administration was trying to keep life-saving medical care flowing to all the needy "and I think it is just a handy kind of political slogan that someone came up with."

Williams says Medi-Cal costs could soar to $900 million this coming year because of increased use by the state's poor and escalating medical costs.

Misery At The Bridge Table Is Two Aces, Net Of One Trick

You're sitting at the bridge table minding your own business with two ace-queens in your hand. The opponents bid like crazy, and you're rooting for them to get to a slam. They do, and you double. How happy can you get?

DEUCE LEAD

West led the deuce of spades, and Brooklyn expert Leonard Jefferson smiled as he looked at the dummy. Just in case you're confused, Jefferson was playing the South hand. East, with his two ace-queens, wasn't smiling at all.

Jefferson ruffed the first ade and resisted the temptation to lead a round of trumps. Instead, he led a diamond to dummy's king and returned a heart. East shrewdly played the queen, and Jefferson won with the king.

The Brooklyn master still couldn't afford to lead a trump. He cashed the top diamonds, discarding a heart from dummy, and gave up a heart.

PAYS OFF

Now we see why Jefferson had not led a trump. West would have been able to win the second round of hearts with the jack and take a second trump out of the dummy. Then dummy would be able to ruff only twice, and declarer would go down.

As the play actually went, the defenders took their heart trick and got one trump out of the dummy. Jefferson was able to ruff one diamond and two hearts with the three trumps that still remained in the dummy.

Misery at the bridge table is a pair of aces that take only one trick against a doubled slam contract.

Historians Debunk XIT Brand's Fiction

DALHART, Tex. (UPI)—Historians destroy one gentle myth about the "XIT Ranch," a ranch that once covered parts of 10 counties of Texas. The "XIT" name and brand did not come from the phrase "Ten in Texas," but was really a meaningless symbol.

The man who designed the brand, Ab Blocker, said he was asked to design one that could be run with a straight branding iron and which rustlers could not burn over into a new design. Blocker said he scratched "X...I...T" in the sand with his bootheel and the design seemed to fill the bill. So it stayed.

Baha'i's See Greater World Role

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — He sat straight in the chair, a little, old man of 92, clad in a black suit with a black vest buttoned up to the neck, gesturing animatedly, as he spoke of a religious founder whom no other living person knew so well.

"Nobody can recall him as I can," said Tarazu'llah Samandari. "For six months, as a youth of 16 and 17, I was with him while he was a prisoner under house arrest. Such a great intelligence and power.

"I was twice present when his revealed words were coming, and were recorded by his secretary. The would sit on the floor, with polished paper around him. Baha'u'llah would stand at the window, facing the room.

"In those two times, I see his face, I see his whole body, and the words would come uninterruptedly, very fast, like a torrential rain. At other times, he is so majestic and so powerful it is difficult to look at him."

Such are the memories which Samandari, a "Hand" of the Baha'i faith, has of its founder, the Persian seer who a century ago proclaimed himself "him whom God manifests," offering what he termed revelations for the modern age.

Comparatively, it's an infant religion, with a scattering of followers throughout the world, including about 20,000 in this country, including Marin, and it is just now concluding the celebration of its centennial year.

"We think it's going to become the world religion of the future — that a majority of people will come to accept it,"said Arthur L. Dahl, a Carmel investment counselor and treasurer of the Baha'i National Assembly.

"We're still in the beginning stage, just as Christianity was when it was only 100 years old, but with the same spirit of immediacy that Christianity had in its early years, and with the same tremendous impact on individuals."

The faith emphasizes the unity of God, of mankind and of all religions, with an accent on practical ethics. It regards Baha'u'llah as the latest in a line of divine messengers, including Abraham, Moses, Krishna, Buddha, Zoroaster, Christ and Mohammed.

"There have been many divine guides, each with a special dispensation for his own period of time," said Samandari, on a tour in this country from Qazvin, near Teheran, Iran, the area of ancient Persia where the religion began.

"The coming of Baha'u'llah is exactly like the dispensation of Christ, who promised there would be new revelations that could not be given to the world at that time," he added.

Pausing, the old Persian sat for a moment, his hands pressed together on his knees, then he looked up, his blue eyes level behind dark-rimmed glasses, and he lifted both hands in a command for attention.

"This is very important." Again he paused, while a translator relayed the phrase, and then he went on, his hands shaping his points.

"A manifestation of God is like the sun, bringing light, heat and energy to the world. Baha'u'llah has given what is needed by mankind for this time. But there is always resistance, a fact of reality we know from history. But no power can finally resist the power of the word of God."

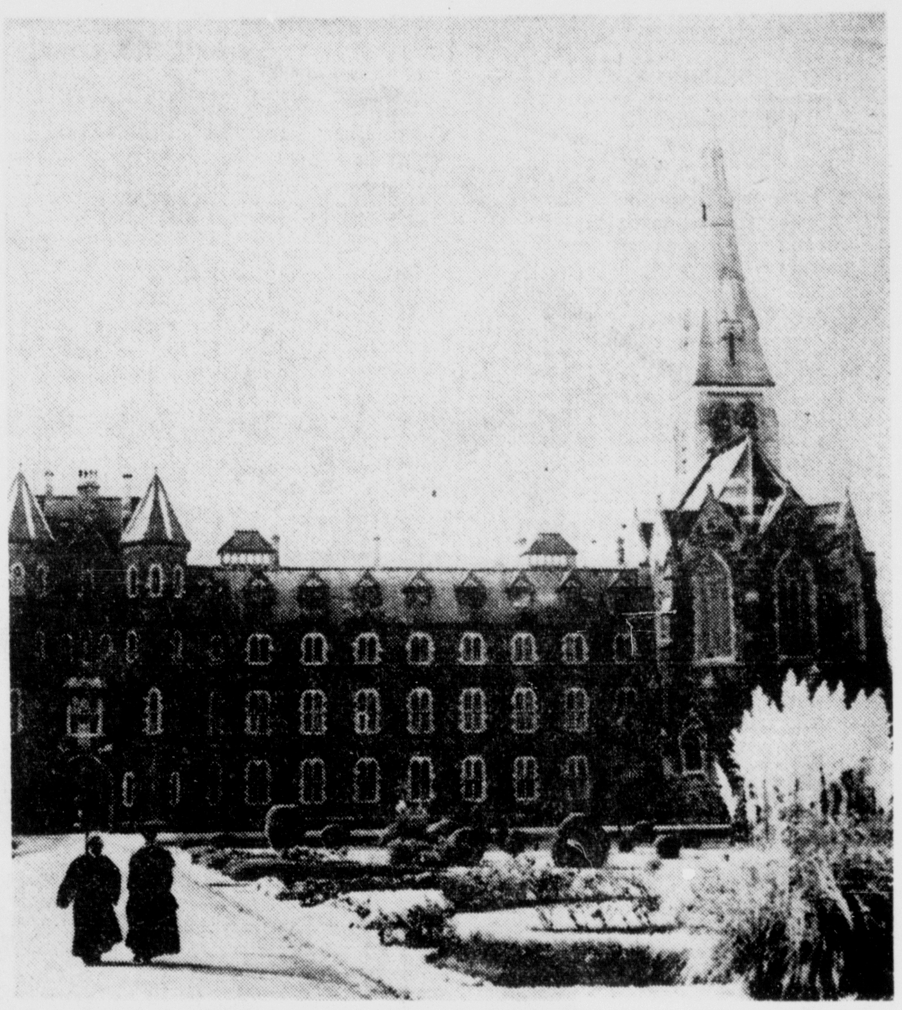
Baha'u'llah lived between 1817 and 1892, claiming his divine mission in 1867 in a message to the rulers of the world urging disarmament, peace and justice.

He spent much of his life afterward in prison or under house arrest at the behest of the Persian and Turkish governments who suspected revolutionary tendencies among followers. He wrote profusely, about 100 books, most of them still untranslated from the Arabic.

"Set your faces toward unity," was his recurring theme, and he applied it to harmonizing races, nations, religions.

Key social goals are universal peace, a world tribunal of justice, a supplemental world language, a cooperative economy abolishing extremes of wealth and poverty, universal education, equality of races and sexes.

There is no ordained clergy. The "Hands of the Faith" — of which only 23 survive — are teachers appointed by Baha'u'llah or his two ensuing successors, both of whom are now deceased. The jurisdiction has been assumed by a nine-member, elected House of Justice in Haifa, Israel.



FIGHTING DECLINE—A decline in the number of young men seeking a vocation in the church has prompted plans for an intensive recruiting drive by Ireland's seminaries, including this one, St. Patrick's College, the country's most famous seminary. (UPI Telephoto)

Seminaries In Ireland Act To Halt Student Dropouts

DUBLIN (UPI)—A decline in the number of young men seeking a vocation in the church, coupled with a growing rate of dropouts during training, has prompted plans for an intensive recruiting drive by Ireland's seminaries, traditional centers of missionary activity.

By world standards the rate of young men choosing a vocation in church remains high and the situation is not critical. But the decline of applicants has been a steady even if small one in recent years, and the seminaries are acting now to be sure the situation is not allowed to drift into what might become a real problem.

There is general agreement that in today's rapidly changing world the challenge to the seminaries is to present the missionary and religious life in a revitalized form more in keeping with the late 1960's than old, traditional methods.

Another factor affecting diocesan recruitment in Ireland is the competition of American dioceses which offer a more attractive proposition to many young men. This includes financial help during seminary years, the prospect of a more comfortable, prosperous life than in Ireland, and the hope of getting a parish sooner.

The last official survey, undertaken by the conference of amjor religious superiors in 1965, showed that entry to clerical institutes had dropped from 285 in 1962 to 191 in 1965, and entry to brotherhoods attached to institutes from 52 to 22. The downward trend has continued.

The number of dropouts has been increasing, too. It was estimated that about 35 per cent of the classes of major seminaries ordained during the years 1961-1966 had dropped out during the courses. Those classes ordained this year and to be ordained in 1968 will show a dropout rate of about 50 per cent.

In the case of the missionary societies the average fall-out per class has been mounting steadily—30 per cent in the 1940s, 40 per cent in the 1950s and 50 per cent in the 1960s to date.

In the past there has been little need for any organized drive to recruit candidates for the priesthood in Ireland.

This situation is changing, however, in the face of a modern world which views rules and regulations with disfavor and which demands excitement and challenge as a norm of existence.

TO SPEAK — Dr. Arnold B. Come, president of San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will speak on "Violence Shall Be No More," the 9 and 11 a.m. services tomorrow at the First Presbyterian Church of San Anselmo.

Education Session Set At Seminary

Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary will host the annual meeting of the Western Religious Education Association Jan. 25-26.

The group is composed of vocational religious education workers in Southern Baptist churches in the Western states.

Speakers for the meeting will include Dr. Brooke R. Faulkner, church administration consultant, Baptist Sunday School Board, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. Eva Marie Kennard, director of international student work, Berkeley; Mrs. Doris Monroe, Training Union Department, Baptist Sunday School Board; Lowell Brown, minister of education, First Baptist Church, Van Nuys.

Also Dr. Richard B. Cunningham, assistant professor of systematic theology and christian philosophy, Golden Gate Baptist Seminary; Dr. J. Roger Skelton, professor of religious education, Golden Gate Baptist Seminary, and Edith Howland, church day care department Skyway Baptist Church, San Francisco.

The program theme, "Beyond the Routine," will be an endeavor to encourage a more active participation in the religious education programs offered by Southern Baptist churches.

Non-Christian Religious Study Set By Church

"Christ and the Faiths of Men" will be the title of a five-week Tuesday evening series at the First Methodist Church of San Rafael.

Dr. Philip F. Whitmer, pastor, and Mrs. Whitmer are co-chairmen of the study which will explore non-Christian religions.

Dr. Whitmer will introduce the study at the first meeting on Tuesday. The program will consist of interviews with persons of other faiths, reported by members of the congregation and a discussion of each.

"Major living religions" will be the topic Jan. 16 by Dr. Surjit Singh, professor of Christian philosophy at San Francisco Theological Seminary.

On Jan. 30 "Clouded Questions," a dramatic discussion starter, will show how people of different cultures see human need differently.

Guest speaker Feb. 6 will be Dr. Floyd Shacklock, professor of missions at Pacific School of Religion, Berkeley. His topic will be "Christ and the Faiths of Men."

Assisting in planning the series are Mmes. Wendell Slayton, William Smith, Robert Woodhurst and Wendell Hall.

On Jan. 23, Methodist Men's night, congregation and guests have been invited to attend related program at 8 p.m. Guest will be Rev. Shojo Oi, minister of the Buddist Church of San Francisco.

Holy Communion

First Methodist Church of San Rafael will hold a type of New Year's resolution services tomorrow at 9:15 and 11 a.m. with holy communion being offered.

PULPIT GUEST — Rev. Edward V. Stein, professor of pastoral psychology at San Francisco Theological Seminary in San Anselmo, will preach at services tomorrow at the First Presbyterian Church of San Rafael. Dr. Stein has been on the faculty since 1959, coming from the Union Theological Seminary in Manila, the Philippines.

Collegians Seek Funds For Hungry

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI) — Students in American Lutheran Church-affiliated colleges favor a moratorium on church building in order to make funds available to meet the crisis of world hunger, and they proposed an austerity program of their own to help the cause.

Representatives of student bodies of 12 colleges at a conference here voted to ask the 1968 convention of the AIC to recommend a two-year moratorium on building projects by local congregations.

The action followed the annual Thanksgiving weekend meeting of student body presidents and coordinators.

SOUNDER VISION?

Christian Theology In State Of Chaos

NEW YORK (AP) — Christian theology — the science of divine realities — today is in a state of chaos, many of its experts admit.

They say it's going through a crucible of hard re-examination and consequent turmoil, from which a possible sounder vision may emerge in the future.

"Today, we are at the end of a theological era, with the old theological systems a shambles," says Rev. Dr. James Y. McCord, president of Princeton Theological Seminary.

Doctrinal formulas are being questioned. Approaches to ethics are in dispute. Church organizational systems are under fire.

Old distinctions between natural and supernatural often are blurred. Even age-old concepts of God are being challenged.

"The newer theology has learned to live again with contradiction and frustration," says a Lutheran theologian, Rev. Dr. Martin E. Mary of the University of Chicago Divinity School.

The tumult in religious thought has broken out both in Protestantism and Roman Catholicism, with many people in the pews deeply disturbed by the academic arguing over interpretations they considered immutably fixed.

One problem, says a Catholic theologian, Rev. Gregory Baum of Toronto, is that to repeat the same doctrinal terminology used in the past may mean "something quite different" in present times.

"In order to say the same thing as we said in the past, we must interpret what we then meant, and then affirm this meaning in the present context," he writes in the St. Louis Review.

However, Rev. Dr. John W. Meister, newly installed head of the United Presbyterian Council on Theological Education, says the believer of "simple faith" feels seriously threatened by the new currents.

"The church that once dispensed mystical drugs to sustain him until he reached a better world now calls him to engage in one struggle after another to transform the present world," he told a Chicago gathering.

He added that the churches have a major responsibility to give such laymen a better theological understanding, amid social and intellectual upheavals that have blown traditional definitions to shreds.

Secretariat Place To Write On Proselytism

NEW YORK (UPI)—Lutheran World Federation reports that a member of the Vatican Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity told an international Lutheran Mission meeting in Baden, Austria, that any difficulties experienced with Roman Catholics in mission areas should be referred to the Secretariat.

He was Father August B. Hasler, who said that while Protestant-Roman Catholic union cannot be foreseen, there are many opportunities for close cooperation. Then, offering "a word of practical advice," he said: "If you should have difficulties with the Roman Catholic hierarchy in your mission fields, if you see proselytism on our side . . . and so forth, please write the Secretariat for Promoting Christian Unity."

Official Visit

Bishop C. Kilmer Myers, of the diocese of California, will make his first official visit to St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Belvedere on Jan. 21, conducting both the 8 and 10 a.m. services.

Mariners 'Blow' Opener

By KIMO CAMPBELL

Freshman forward Clint Brown sank a free throw with 13 seconds left to give the College of the Siskiyous Eagles a 72-71 decision over the College of Marin in the Tars' Golden Valley Conference opener in Kentfield last night.

While an estimated crowd of 300 watched in disbelief, the Tars let a seemingly caged flock of Eagles, down by as much as 12 points in the first half, take the game away from them in the last seconds.

After leading by four at the half, the Tars fell behind, but came back to lead 67-66 on Russ Smith's jumper with 3:51 left. The lead changed hands again when Siskiyous' Dean Blevins stole the ball and scored on a triumphant breakaway layup to put the Eagles ahead 71-69.

Marin's Keith Kornelis then scored with 56 seconds left, but Tom Stetson, forced to foul or give up a layup, fouled Siskiyous' Brown, who made the first of his two shots for the winning margin. The Tars got the ball with 13 seconds left but threw it away and the Eagles dribbled out the last few seconds.

Roland Holcomb, the northerners' 6-foot, 8-inch pivotman, spend almost half the second half on the bench saddled with four personal fouls, but Marin was unable to capitalize on his absence. The All-GVC star led all scorers with 20 points in his brief appearance, in addition to garnering 11 rebounds and blocking 4 shots. A fair night's work.

But it was more Marin's offensive uncertainty that lost the game. Said coach Cal Riemcke: "We blew it. We just blew it. When the team plays our offense, we score. But when they come down and fool around — they try to freelance and they just fritter it away."

True. Without guard Andre Horn, bedridden by pneumonia,

A gangling substitute center and a spunky defensive specialist provided Marin Catholic High School with fourth-quarter teeth and gave the Wildcats a tooth-and-nail 68-61 victory over San Rafael in the Marin County Athletic League basketball opener for both teams at Kentfield last night.

The Wildcats, one of the teams expected to give Tamalpais a run for the loop crown, showed why they are one of the top scoring teams in the league as they let loose with a carefree run-and-shoot game that was almost matched by the Bulldogs' pack of new faces.

Substitute center Art Goepp punched in 10 points in the final period and guard Mark Carbone, the defensive specialist, whipped in a pair of quick baskets that gave the Wildcats a 60-50 lead with 3 minutes, 50 seconds left, a margin that proved to be too much for the foul-troubled Bulldogs to overcome.

Goepp finished with 13 points, while teammates Ches Bornia with 17, Rick Garms with 11 and Stacey Schaefer with 14 rounded out the Marin Catholic double figure scoring.

Bornia scored 12 of his points in the first period when the 'Cats fed him in the middle constantly.

Forward Roger Thomas scored 19 points, mostly from long range, to top the Bulldogs.

Raiders Given Tips For The Super Bowl

For the benefit of the Oakland Raiders of the American Football League, who will have to play the Green Bay Packers of the National Football League, here are a few valuable pointers they may want to have for that game.

When a pass falls to the ground between the passer and the receiver or beyond for any reason at all, but particularly because the defensive lineman gives the intended receiver a whack at the line of scrimmage before he goes out, this is what is called an "incomplete pass." It is perfectly legal although there hasn't been more than one or two in the AFL since its inception.

When a pass is thrown from a quarterback to an eligible receiver, it is perfectly permissible for a member of the defensive team to catch it if he is closer to the ball. This is known as "intercepting" a pass. It, too, is legal and, in fact, when you're playing the Green Bay Packers, even likely.

Hey! Defense Can Recover Fumble

A fumble is a free ball and may be fallen on by anyone, not necessarily the man who fumbles it. If, as never happens in the AFL, the ball is fallen on by a member of the defensive team, the ball goes over to them.

When a man is running with the football, feel free to jump on him and knock him down. This is called a "tackle." It may be made at any time and it is not, repeat not, necessary to wait until the man with the football has run 80 to 90 yards.

There are other ways to get the football besides letting the other guys score and then having them kick off to you. You can, for instance, stop them three times within 10 yards and they will be forced to punt.

A "punt" is a kick made from the line of scrimmage which distinguishes it from the kicks off a tee which are the only kind made in the AFL.

Blocking Legal In Other League

When a ball-carrier is carrying the ball, it is not only possible for a member of the defensive team to knock him down, it is also possible for a member of the offensive team to knock somebody down. This is called "blocking."

There is no law which says that a quarterback must be allowed to get a pass off. A condition of play known as "eating the football" is frequently employed by quarterbacks in the other league and is habitually forced upon them by linebackers who frequently indulge in a style of defensive attack where they do not drift back to tackle receivers after they have caught the football but, rather, tackle the passer before he throws it. This is known as "blitzing," "red dogging," "shooting the gap," and so on. It is frowned on in the AFL. For one thing, it holds the score down.

It is not, repeat not, necessary to have a point total at, or in excess of, 80. A game is perfectly legal if it ends 7-0.

The average offensive play does not, repeat not, have to reach or exceed 17 yards.

NFL Encourages Blocking Kicks

Feel free to prevent the football from getting downfield on all kicks. If you can put your body in front of the ball and between the kicker and receiver or goalpost, it is not only legal in the NFL but encouraged.

Three or more men may tackle the ball-carrier at the same time without penalty. This is known as "gang tackling" and is regarded as insurance in the other league.

A ball-carrier may elect to run with the ball as many times in a series of downs as he wishes. It is not, repeat not, required that every second play, at the very least, be a pass.

Feel free to break the protective cup around the passer.

Before you try any or all of these things with the Green Bay Packers, please check and be sure your insurance programs are up to date and paid-in-full and your beneficiary's name legible and printed out. And be sure and carry a medal with your own name, rank and serial number in case there are any key parts of you missing — like your hand — when they cut you free from Ray Nitschke.

60-YARD CRASH — The 60-yard dash in the All-American Track and Field Games at the Cow Palace last night turned into the 60-yard crash when one of the sprinters slipped after the finish, causing others to tumble to the floor against the arena's glass doors. Attendants rush to give aid to the fallen runners. (UPI telephoto)

Sprinter Hurt; 5 Records Fall

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Five meet records were broken and five tied and Rose Bowl star Earl McCollouch made a sensational switch to track at the All-American Games last night.

This first indoor meet leading toward the Olympics in Mexico City next fall attracted an unusually good indoor field of Olympics and world record holders and a meet record crowd of 12,103 to the Cow Palace.

McCulloch, Southern California football end, won an eyelash victory in the 60-yard low hurdles only four days after helping the Trojans defeat Indiana in the Rose Bowl. He hit the last hurdle and barely caught world and Olympics record long jumper Ralph Boston at the tape. Both were timed in 7.2, tying the meet record.

Kirk Clayton, Santa Clara Valley Youth Village, crashed heavily in a four-man tangle at the finish of the 60-yard dash. He was taken to Mary's Help Hospital for head X-rays and was held for observation after they showed no brain damage.

Sensational 18-year-old Billy Gaines, a San Jose high school star, won that race in 6 seconds flat, beating self-styled world's fastest human Charlie Greene, Mel Pender, Jim Hines and Willie Turner. Gaines Greene and Pender also fell against a door at the end of the track after Gaines tangled in the tape.

Gaines' 6 flat tied the meet record. The finish was so close Greene was given the same time.

SIMPSON SEVENTH

O. J. Simpson, McCullouch's starring teammate in the Rose Bowl, tested his legs in this race and finished seventh among eight runners.

Bob Griffin of San Jose State won the other 60 in 6.1.

Cherrie Sherrard of San Francisco's Laurel Track Club tied her own meet record 7.7 in the women's 60 hurdles.

These meet records were set:

Bob Seagren, Southern California, 17 feet-½ inch, pole vault.

Bob Beamon, unattached, El Paso, Tex., 26-9¾, long jump. Boston was third with 24 feet, ¾ inch. Beamon was voted outstanding athlete of the meet.

Charles Craig, unattached, 51-3½, triple jump.

Martin McGrady, Youth Village, 1:10.9, 600 yards.

Lee Evans, San Jose State, 48.5, 440-yard dash.

George Woods of the Pacific Coast Club, Long Beach, surprised with a 64-8½ shot put victory, beating Dave Maggard and Dave Davis among others.

Jan Dahlgren, who arrived only 48 hours earlier from Sweden, won the high jump at 6-11 with Dragan Andjelkovic of Yugoslavia sharing third at 6-8.

DOUBLE JINXED WARRIORS HOST CELTS TONIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco Warriors go against the Boston Celtics in a National Basketball Association game at the Cow Palace at 8:30 o'clock tonight after having failed to overcome the double disadvantages of injuries and a jinx.

Fred Hetzel, a flu bug victim, probably will return to the lineup against Boston. But guard Jim King is still suffering from a muscle injury and may not be in action until next week.

Neither King nor Hetzel played Thursday night when the Warriors were beaten by the St. Louis Hawks 106-98 in a close defensive clash.

The Hawks, out in front of the second place Warriors by a game and a half in the Western Division, have hexed San Francisco in six out of seven meetings.

Tommie Smith of the Youth Village won the 300 yard dash, a new event here, in 31.9 — far from the U.S. national record, 30.5.

Ulf Hoegberg, Dahlgren's teammate, also newly arrived, was second in the mile to Preston Davis, Pacific Club, who won in 4:04.6.

The featured mile relay went to the Southern California Striders anchored by Ron Whitney behind Bob Frey, Mike Larrabee and Bill Toomey.

University of California at Berkeley surprised by placing second ahead of San Jose State with Lee Evans and the Youth Village with Tommie Smith.

MARIN MISS

Leslie Clark, 17-year-old Drake High School student, was a member of the Laurel Track Club's winning 660-yard medley relay team in women's competition.

The team won in 1:15.8.

Leslie finished fourth in the women's 60-yard hurdles with a time of 8.4.

Tamalpais High School dash ace Alan Lee was not entered in the 60-yard dash of the high school division as previously reported. (See summaries on page 22.)

Mays Vs. Ruth? Forget It

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Those who expect Willie Mays to hit 714 home runs, manage the San Francisco Giants and shift to first base are advised by one Willie Mays not to wait.

"I might hit 600 but I don't think I'll be able to reach the other one," says Mays, referring to the gap between his 564 home runs and Babe Ruth's all time record of 714. Mays will be 37 on May 6.

"I don't want to manage. It's very hard work and not secure," he said of his future. "I'd have to give it a great deal of thought if it was offered. I'd love to stay in baseball because I think I can do a lot of things for a lot of kids in the teaching field.

"I don't even want to discuss what's going to happen after I stop playing."

When a writer asked Willie if there was any chance he might shift from center field to first base, Mays looked up and grinned. "Where's Willie McCovey going to play?," he asked.

Mays was visiting the city to accept a $12,000 Italian sports car from the bat company with which he has long been associated.

WILLIE MAYS

As usual, the conversation got around to how many years Willie has left as a player.

"I want to play as long as I can do my best," he said. "As long as I am not embarrassing myself or the ball club. I still can make the plays and swing the bat, maybe not every day."

Mays said he seldom took a day off from the park but would sit out the second games of some doubleheaders with the permission of Manager Herman Franks.

Although he has yet to sign another $125,000 contract, he expects no problems with owner Horace Stoneham for whom he has played his entire career.

"They tell me they won't be throwing the spitter next year," said Mays, referring to a recent rules change that forbids pitchers from going to their mouths with the throwing hand. "I thought that was against the rules all the time. I wish I could name names but I won't. There are about 10 pitchers. When they throw, I see funny things happening to the ball."

Mays reluctantly answered one nonbaseball question to say that he didn't approve of the proposed Negro boycott of the Olympics and suggested a discussion of problems.

"Have you been up to look at the old Polo Grounds?," a fellow asked. The Giants' old park now has become a housing development.

"I've got a girl friend lives up there," said Mays.

"In center field?"

Cal Report Shows It Was A Good Year To Be A Deer

By JOHN D. COX

SACRAMENTO (UPI)—All in all, it was a good season to be a deer.

"You would think maybe something happened to the deer," suggests Fish and Game's Don Beauchamp, "but this just doesn't seem to be the case at all."

Here are the dreary statistics:

The 1967 season was down 42 per cent from a year earlier—the worst buck kill in California in 22 years.

The final 1967 buck tag count was 40,000, down from the tag count of 69,118 in 1966. The tag return to the Department of Fish and Game was the lowest since 1945, when 38,129 buck tags came in.

Beauchamp, assistant to big game coordinator Wallace MacGregor, and other department deer watchers lay most of the blame on a combination of several natural conditions.

They blame the weather, length of the Northern California season, the condition of the range, reduced hunting pressure and Fish and Game's experimental new system of self-validation of deer tags.

For one thing, last year there was a lower population of legal bucks in northeastern California because of poor fawn production and survival.

"This is something that has been going on for several years," notes Beauchamp "We've had a range condition leading to the poor condition of the animals themselves.

"We've had a high population of deer that was out of balance with the carrying capacity of the range," he said. "There should have been fewer deer on the ranges."

For another thing, the deer season was two weeks shorter last year in Del Norte and parts of Humboldt, Siskiyou, Trinity, Shasta, Tehama, Glenn and Butte counties.

The season was shortened by the Fish and Game Commission at the request of sportsmen's groups.

And then there was the weather.

First, a real wet spring in 1967, producing tremendous forage conditions for the deer, allowing the animals to remain well scattered, feeding quickly and easily.

"The density of deer for a given area was less," says Beauchamp.

Then, there was the dry fall.

"We had almost bluebird weather right through the season without any major storms occurring at all," said Beauchamp. This kept the deer from migrating, a practice which, by their very movement, makes the animals more vulnerable.

For example, the big Lassen-Washoe herd which summers in Plumas and Lassen counties — a major source of deer for the region—didn't follow its usual tradition last year of moving into northern Nevada during the season.

The herd moved later, when more convincing signs of winter appeared.

One of the simplest factors in the skimpy showing of the 1967 deer season was the fact there were fewer hunters in the field, while tag sales remained about the same as 1966.

"It's just a matter of conjecture," said Beauchamp, seeking a reason for the low turnout. Opening weekend was something of a bust, he said, and word-of-mouth communication of this fact may have had a snowballing effect for the entire season.

Finally, the shift to self-validation of deer tags probably resulted in fewer tags being sent to Sacramento. Fish and Game is still studying the magnitude of this factor.

What about next season?

"I would think your kill will go up," says Beauchamp. "What you didn't get this year is going to be available next year."

And they'll be bigger.

PLAYOFF BOWL ON TV: IT'S RAMS VS. BROWNS

The Los Angeles Rams and the Cleveland Browns tangle in the eighth annual NFL Playoff Bowl in Miami tomorrow.

The game will be televised by CBS Television at 10:45 a.m. (PST).

The Browns, Eastern Division runnersup, bring a 9-6 record into the contest. It will be their third Playoff Bowl appearance. They lost to Detroit in 1961 and Green Bay in 1964.

The Rams will be making their first Playoff Bowl appearance, bringing with them a sparkling 12-1-2 record.

Proceeds from the game, which is expected to attract a crowd of 50,000 fans, will go into the NFL players' pension fund.

2, Maybe 3, Turbines To Enter Indy '500'

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Two New Zealand drivers, Denis Hulme, world titleholder, and Bruce McLaren, will drive turbine-powered cars in this year's Indianapolis 500 race, it was announced yesterday.

L.G. Trusdale, General Manager of Racing for the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., and Ken Wallis, designer-builder of Wallis Engineering Inc., said the two cars are now being constructed and will feature a new approach to the four-wheel drive concept.

They said the cars are being built with enough spare parts for a third at the Wallis plant in Torrance, Calif.

Goodyear and Shelby Racing Co., Inc., of Los Angeles are taking part in the project.

CONTROVERSIAL CAR

Parnelli Jones introduced the turbine-powered car to Indianapolis last May and finished second when it broke down in the final laps after leading most of the way. The controversial car caused quite an uproar as many demanded it be outlawed from competition.

Wallis said power for the two cars will be furnished by General Electric turbine engines, which have been modified to meet his specifications.

The engines will comply with the United States Auto Club rule limiting the area of the engine's air intake to 15.99 square inches, Wallis added.

UNLIMITED SIZE

Turbine powered cars previously run at Indianapolis have been unlimited with regard to engine size while piston engines have had a definite displacement limit.

Wallas said his new four-wheel drive concept is a "hybrid mechanical-hydraulic system."

Torque is allocated to the four wheels on an individual basis and the ratio of torque among the wheels is automaticlly adjusted to the requirements of the vehicle during operation, Wallis added.

Al Dowd, Shelby Racing Co. administrator, will be team manager.

Hulme finished fourth in last year's 500 race. McLaren will be competing in the race for the first time.

Adult Fitness Class To Open At Redwood

Redwood High School is offering two adult physical fitness education classes beginning next week.

Physical education for women starts Monday and weight training and conditioning for men starts Wednesday.

Both classes will be held from 7:30-9:00 p.m The men's class will be taught by Redwood baseball coach Al Endriss.

Pirates Down Terra Linda; Art Pla Stars

Drake High School's Pirates, acting as if a mediorcre practice season had never happened, got down methodically to the business of gunning for their third straight Marin County Athletic League basketball title last night by whipping past Terra Linda, 64-51, on the Trojans' court.

Terra Linda, usually tough as nails at home, kept it close for three periods, trailing by two after a quarter, by one at the half and by four going into the final period.

That's when the Pirates exploded, outscoring the Trojans 20-11 to win going away.

LONG SHOOTER

Art Pla, a long-shooting guard, did most of the damage, with 19 points, including 9 fielders.

Burly center Don Stone added 18 points and junior guard Curry Miller chipped in with 11 points.

Pat Purcell whipped in 16 points for the losers and Tom McCart added 13.

The Trojans were playing without No. 2 scorer John Thibedeaux, out with an ankle injury.

It's A Romp For Redwood Over Novato

Novato Hornets should have shut the lights and gone home at halftime last night in their Marin County Athletic League basketball opener against Redwood High School at Novato.

The Hornets, owning a 6-5 practice record, trailed the Giants, 28-27, which is not too promising, but it was nothing compared to what happened in the second half.

What had been a tight game turned into a rout as the Hornets mustered only 8 points in the second half while Redwood was rolling along with 38 for a 66-35 romp.

Not one Novato player made double figures with Bob Anderson and Bob Tait settling for "high" honors with seven points apiece.

12 MEN SCORE

The Giants, meanwhile, got just about everybody but the referee in the scoring column, with 12 players chalking up at least two points.

Six-four center Tom Seidenberg helped turned the game into a rout. He hit on four straight fielders in the third quarter when the Giants outscored the Hornets, 15-5.

A Cold Weekend Seen For Seals

OAKLAND (AP) — Deeply frozen into the National Hockey League cellar, the Oakland Seals will endeavor to unthaw tonight against the Minnesota North Stars at the Oakland Arena.

In view of Oakland's disasters on the recent roadtrip, the prospects aren't very warming.

The Seals, although they broke a four - game scoring drought, were humbled by the Detroit Red Wings Thursday night 9-3. Oakland has now lost 9 of the last 10 games, trailing league-leading Philadelphia by 19 points and St. Louis, next to last place team in the Western Division, by 9.

Oakland winds up the weekend as a Sunday night host to Los Angeles.

Tamites Win At Buzzer

The Tamalpais Indians seem to have a knack for winning when they are missing some of their players.

Yesterday, super-center Pat Schafer sat out the game with an injured ankle but the Indians still subdued Sonoma High School, 38-37 in a non-league basketball game at Tamalpais.

They didn't do it by much. It took Floyd Jackson's jumper at the buzzer on an out of-bounds play to do it.

Jackson scored 10 points in the final period when the Indians outscored Sonoma, 13-9. He finished with 17, high for the Indians.

Highly-touted Skip Saffores topped Sonoma with 19 points.

The Indians, now 7-3, open league play against Marin Catholic next Tuesday.

BOWLING TIPS

By MARION LADEWIG

Keep your shoulders level. If you drop the shoulder that delivers the ball you will have great accuracy problems. The remedy is concentrate on reaching out as you deliver the ball, as though you want to touch the pins.

TARS

the Tars lacked stability on offense, moving in spurts and stutters. This was not attributable to Horn's replacement, Russ Williams, who played very well, but to the whole team, which gave Siskiyous too many chances to come back. Several Mariners—Williams, Tom Herrnberger, Stetson, Keith Kornelis — played well in spots, but without the consistency that could have won. The Eagles were too good a team to allow an opponent to get away with mental errors — and they didn't.

Kornelis led the scoring with 19 points, followed by Williams' 15. All five starters hit double figures, but no one else managed to score. Blevins, an excellent backcourt man, followed Holcomb with 15 for Siskiyous.

The Tars had two more field goals than the Eagles, but hit on five less free throws, despite an equal number of opportunities.

The Mariners will try to garner their first GVC win of the year tonight against Shasta. Game time is 8 p.m.

In the preliminary game, the Mare Island Navy team won a low comedy 79-74 game over the Marin junior varsity. Scott Hague had 24 points to pace the JV's while Pat Dudgeon had 17 for Mare Island.

Marin Scoring: Keith Kornelis, 7-5-19; Tom Stetson, 4-6-14, plus 16 rebounds; Russ Williams, 6-3-15; Tom Herrnberger, 5-1-11; Russ Smith, 6-0-12. Totals: 28-15-27-71.

UCLA, USC, Stanford Win; Cal Is Shocked

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

UCLA won easily, Southern California won the hard way and Oregon State scored an upset as Pacific-8 basketball teams began the conference schedule.

The Bruins, the nation's top-ranked college team, had an easy time last night with Washington State. The final was 97-67 and the margin—28 points—was the lowest in the last eight games for Coach John Wooden's team.

But Wooden was toasted for winning anyway since it was his 400th career triumph at the Westwood campus in 20 years of tuteledge.

The victory was also UCLA's ninth without a loss this season, the 43rd in a row over the past three years and the 33rd in a row at Pauley Pavilion—where the Uclans have never lost.

ALCINDOR HIGH

Lew Alcindor, the 7-foot-1½ agile giant, tossed in 32 points, nine more than opposing center Jim McKean.

McKean and Alcindor were so good last season that both were picked to the Pac-8's all-AAWU first team.

Bill Hewitt of Southern Cal, who was also on that first squad was the hero for the Trojans last night as he sank a twisting bank shot only 38 seconds before the final buzzer in USC's 58-56 shaving of Washington.

Trojan Coach Bob Boyd was not pleased with the way his team played but Hewitt, who averaged 17.6 points per game during the Pac-8 season last year, began the current conference campaign with 26 points. He hit on 10 of 18 shots from the floor.

BEARS SHOCKED

Oregon State shocked California's Golden Bears 76-63 behind Vince Fritz's 22 points. Gary Freeman, a 6-foot-9 sophomore center, made his Pac - 8 debut in the game a bright one for Coach Paul Valenti.

Freeman scored 20 points and held his own with Cal's 6-foot-10½ center Bob Presley. Presley had 23 points to top all scorers.

Stanford opened it's conference season with a 79-73 victory over Oregon as guard Arthur Harris rammed in 37 points.

The Ducks got 20 points from forward Ken Smith, 18 from Bob Craven and 16 from center John Pinkstaff but the Indians, who led 39-32 at the half, were not to be denied despite a howling Oregon State crowd.

The Bruins tangle with the Huskies in tonight's action while USC hosts Washington State and Stanford and Cal switch opponents.

Washington State Has New Coach

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPOKANE, Wash. — As a football coach Jim Sweeney has been a university president's delight, mainly because for Montana State University he has won football games.

Now, Washington State University president W. Glenn Terrell is all smiles because WSU, for $20,000 a year, has lured Sweeney away from MSU to become the Cougars' new head football coach, succeeding the departed Bert Clark.

JIM SWEENEY

Sweeney led Montana State to three Big Sky Conference championships and a 30-20 record in four years. The Cougars posted a 2-8 record last season, finished at the bottom of the Pacific-Eight Conference and set a school record for the longest grid losing streak.

BASEBALL

LOS ANGELES—Duke Snider, one of the all-time great hitters of the Brooklyn Dodgers is now a batting instructor for the Los Angeles Dodgers.

General manager E. J. "Buzzie" Bavasi announced that he had brought the 42-year-old Snider from the Dodgers' Albuquerque farm team, which Snider managed to the Texas League title last season.

ST. LOUIS — Lou Brock, the St. Louis Cardinals' triple threat, became the first of the world champions to sign his 1968 contract, which is estimated to be for $70,000.

BOWLING

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Eddy Patterson of Dallas, Tex., led the way into the finals after 40 games in the $40,000 Phoenix Open.

GOLF

BUENA PARK, Calif.—Billy Casper, Harry Toscano and Al Johnston led a field of 92 pros with first round 68's in the 54-hole $31,000 Southern California Open at the Los Coyotes Country Club.

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. — Ross Collins of Dallas, Tex., fired a 70, his third subpar round, to lead the National Left-handers Open by five strokes with a 54-hole total of 210.

SKIING

OBERSTAUFEN, Germany — Fernande Bochatay of Switzerland decisively won the giant slalom event of the women's World Alpine Skiing Cup, to continue the Swiss domination of the meet.

WATERVILLE VALLEY, N.H. —John Clugh of Hanover, N.H., celebrated his professional ski racing debut by winning a dual slalom against a strong field of former European Olympic medalists.

HORSE RACING

ARCADIA — Time To Leave, $3, took the featured race at Santa Anita, a $10,000 allowance for 3-year-old fillies.

WHITE HOUSE POOL

Popular Fishin' Hole Open—For Time Being

The White House Pool at the upper end of Tomales Bay and the lower section of Papermill Creek is still open for salmon and steelhead fishing, but it's not thanks to a few inconsiderate fishermen.

A month and a half ago, some eager beaver fishermen let out the dam that owner Waldo Giacomini of Point Reyes Station keeps to impound water for his cattle.

Giacomini, a dairy farmer, also said that fishermen had been poaching on his private duck pond.

"I was going to close the area at first," he said. "I reported it to the Fish and Game Commission but they persuaded me to keep it open."

"I've kept this area open for fishermen for the last 25 years," Giacomini added. "Most of the anglers have been pretty good but it's just a few that usually spoil it."

Giacomini intends to keep the area open but if more offenses are committed he may close it. He has No Hunting signs posted. He'll rebuild the dam in the spring.

"I guess I'll just see what happens," he said. "I don't want to close the area but I may if these things happen again."

STEPHEN MURPHY
'Win the war'

Novato Man Says 'We're Winning'

"We are most definitely winning the war," said a Novato airmen who has just returned from a year of flying helicopter combat missions in Vietnam.

W. O. Stephen E. Murphy, 21, was awarded the Purple Heart for a wound he suffered on the last day he flew during his tour of duty and the Distinguished Flying Cross and the Vietnamese Cross of Gallantry.

"The spirit of the men in Vietnam is very high and to pull out now would be a betrayal to the men who have died over there fighting communism to keep it away from this country," Murphy said. Murphy logged 975 hours of combat flying time and was shot down three times.

He joined the service in 1966 and requested his assignment to Vietnam. Murphy is home on leave with his parents, retired Maj. and Mrs. James S. Murphy of 16 Lambert Way, Novato. He will leave Jan. 16 for Fort Rucker, Ala., where he will be trained to fly various types of helicopters.

Attorney To Explain Personal Injury Cases

Legal steps which may be taken after injury accidents and the obligations and responsibilities entailed in various contracts will be detailed by attorney Robert Moran of Sausalito at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Manzanita School, Marin City.

Moran, a San Francisco attorney specializing in personal injury cases, will speak to the basic adult education class at the school, at a session open to the public. The talk is sponsored by the Marin City Economic Opportunity Council.

MILL VALLEY SCHOOLS

Stress On Portables Held 'Overstatement'

A report that portable classrooms will supplant planned additions to Mill Valley elementary schools is "an overstatement," District Supt. James A. Collins said yesterday.

A newsletter mailed this week by the Parents Association for Neighboring Schools, a Mill Valley group, said Collins told the Mill Valley Parent-Teacher Association Council "he does not consider himself bound by the commitments made by the previous administration to improve neighborhood schools. Rather than building additions to these schools, he plans to add more portable classrooms as needed."

"I do definitely recognize the board's commitment to neighborhood schools in the bond issue," Collins said. Up to $1 million of the district's $3.5 million bond issue passed last June was to go for improving neighborhood schools, the rest for a sixth-through-eighth grade middle school.

Collins conceded his study of the question "well might mean" he would recommend portables in some cases.

The bond money available for improving neighborhood schools may shrink to $500,000 because the middle school may cost up to $3 million, estimates now show. The over-all cost of proposed improvements is more than $1.5 million, according to a report given the board last May.

The $3.5 million represents the district's bonding capacity for the next five years.

Library Phone Study Discussed

The Mill Valley Library Board has reviewed a proposed telephone questionnaire on library and public preferences in library service, but postponed action until learning whether members of the library association will do the necessary telephoning to get the public's responses.

The final 10 per cent of construction costs for the new library has been released by state authorities following final audit of the project, the board learned Thursday.

The board voted to keep the library open from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays through February.

The next board meeting was set for 8 p.m. Feb. 8 at the library.

Herb Discussion

Mrs. Charles L. Gannaway of Oakland, a member of the Herb Society of America, will tell how to grow herbs and use them in cooking at a meeting at 8 p.m. Friday of the Redwood Shade Garden Club at St. Stephen's Church, Belvedere.

$93,621 Returned

Marin County was allotted $93,621 as its portion of highway users tax distributed by the state during November.

Funds came from gasoline, diesel fuel taxes, taxes on vehicle registration fees and miscellaneous sources.

Schools May Pull Out Of Library Pact

The administrative services committee of the Marin County Board of Education has recommended that school districts be allowed to withdraw from a county library book program, according to Asst. County Supt. of Schools Stanley H. Friese.

Reed, Kentfield and San Anselmo school districts have already said they will withdraw from the program at the end of the school year, because they now have their own programs for obtaining extra books, Friese said.

If the three districts withdraw, the program, now serving 11,000 pupils, would serve only about half that number.

Last year, $41,000 was budgeted for the county library program, of which the participating districts paid $36,000 and the county schools office paid $5,000, Friese said.

The committee reached the decision Thursday, and the board of education will consider the recommendation Monday.

The State Education Code requires that any change in the county program be made by Feb. 1, according to Friese.

Fairfax General Plan Hearing Is Wednesday

The Fairfax Planning Commission will hold another hearing on the city's proposed general plan at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Fairfax Women's Club.

David J. Sumbardo, city administrator, said the commission hopes for a good turnout of citizens to discuss the plan, which has sparked considerable controversy at previous meetings.

Street Lighting Due Review By Belvedere Council

The Belvedere City Council will get a look Monday at a street lighting master plan to be presented by Donald L. Heinitz, commercial lighting representative for the Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

The meeting will be at 8 p.m. in the city's newly remodeled Community Center at 450 San Rafael Avenue.

Also on the agenda is discussion of a future site for the city's corporation yard.

The present yard, on Tiburon Boulevard, will be used in the future by the State Division of Highways when the boulevard is widened, according to City Mgr. William L. Cavalli. Councilmen will have to find another location in the city or share one with Tiburon.

General Plan For Fairfax On Monday's Planner Agenda

The Fairfax general plan will receive a hearing before the Marin County Planning Commission at 9 a.m. Monday in the commission chambers at Civic Center.

The plan, drawn up for the city by the county planning staff, calls for a top residential density of 10 to 15 units per gross acre. Some Fairfax officials say the density should be raised.

Another portion of the general plan that has drawn criticism is the projected growth for schools. School officials say it is underestimated.

Other items to be considered by commissioners Monday morning include:

Design review of a new firehouse at 1004 Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, Kentfield; more parcels in agricultural preserves, and a new grocery store planned at the corner of Shoreline Highway and Laurel Street in Tamalpais Valley.

The afternoon session will include a discussion of the West Marin master plan bonus proposal, use permit for a trailer-restaurant facility at Dillon Beach on Cliff Street between Beach Avenue and Marine View Drive and a use premit for a service station across Highway 101 from Marin City at the corner of Bolinas and Parepa streets.

Golf Cart Injuries Cause $50,000 Suit

A San Francisco man sued the Meadow Club above Fairfax yesterday, claiming a defective golf cart he rented there Jan. 11, 1967, injured him to the tune of $50,000.

Lewis L. Durkee said he was a guest at the Club and riding an electric cart between the sixth and seventh greens when a cart wheel fell off, throwing him to the ground. He accused the exclusive club of negligence. He claims he suffered neck and shoulder injuries.

East Bay Man Joins Marin's CHP Office

Lt. Louis Gottschalk has been transferred to Marin County from San Leandro to replace Lt. William H. Porter at the California Highway Patrol office in Corte Madera.

Lt. Porter, recently promoted to captain, is being transferred to patrol headquarters in Sacramento next week.

Gottschalk, 45, has been a highway patrolman since 1948. He became a sergeant while working in the San Francisco office. Last November, he was promoted to lieutenant and transferred to San Leandro.

During World War 11, Gottschalk, a native of Oakland, saw four years of active duty in the navy as a gunner's mate and was in the naval reserve for six years, stationed at the Oakland Naval Air Station.

Now in Marin
LT. LOUIS GOTTSCHALK

His duties in the Marin office will include assisting Capt. Theodore F. Parnow, office commander; supervising clerical work in the office, and coordinating the training of officers in the area.

He plans to move to Marin soon with his wife, Arlyne, and their two daughters. His off-duty hobbies include golf and hunting.

Also new on the Marin staff is Sgt. Ralph P. Anderson, who is replacing Sgt. James J. Shanahan, who resigned.

Anderson, 34, has been a highway patrol officer for 11 years, including a previous tour in Marin from 1958 to 1962.

He was transferred here from Palm Desert in the Indio area. He and his wife, Dolores, and their seven children live in Novato.

Marin Prints Novato Plan Book Itself

The 76-page Novato area general plan, including photographs and multi-color sketches, was printed entirely by county personnel and equipment at considerable savings, Marin County planner Albert Solnit said yesterday.

Solnit, chief of advanced planning, said total cost was $1,785 for 500 copies of the plan.

"It would have cost $1,500 more to have it printed outside," he said. "This is the first time that a major job such as this was done entirely by county forces and equipment."

Prining was handled by the county central services office. The only outside contract expense was $190 for binding the booklets by a San Francisco firm.

Sketches and photographs county planning staff, and Forwere prepared by George Johnson, art director of the county planning staff, and Forest Fulton, graphics designer. First copies of the plan were delivered Wednesday.

Forming A Forum In Marin City To Be Discussed

Organization of a community forum in Marin City will be discussed Tuesday night by a steering committee headed by San Rafael attorney Bella Aaron.

Mrs. Aaron is chairman of the police community relations committee of the Marin County Human Rights Commission. The meeting is set for 8 p.m. in room 343 of the Civic Center.

The forum, to provide residents with an avenue for community involvement and communication, was recommended by Gordon E. Misner, professor of criminology at the University of California, last August.

"We are requesting people who as individuals, and in many cases representing one or more groups, are directly involved in the fate of Marin City and its residents, to come together as a steering committee," said Mrs. Aaron.

Motorcycle Stolen

Bruce Thommasen's 1955 Harley Davidson motorcycle was stolen from a garage at 111 Daryl Avenue, Indian Valley, Sunday, Marin Shierff's deputies reported yesterday.

Job Fair Planning Due At Joint Gathering

Plans for "job fair" to bring together prospective employers and employees will be discussed at a meeting in Room 343 of the Civic Center at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

David Johnson, field representative of the Bay Area Urban League, will be in charge of the planning session. He presented the "job fair" idea to the employment committee of the Marin County Human Rights Commission Dec. 12. Since then, Johnson said, he has contacted several groups and individuals and received favorable reaction.

Invited to the Wednesday night session are officials of the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council, North Bay Human Development Corp., League of Women Voters, Marin County Chamber of Commerce, Marin County Labor Council, California State Employment Service Neighborhood Youth Corps, Department of Public Social Services, and other groups.

Mrs. Ilys K. Hernandez, secretary of the human rights commission, said the job fair would be directed toward hiring and training unskilled persons.

Park Work Bidder

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Rice-DeMartini-Smith Inc. of Novato was low bidder, at $58,445, to resurface roads and replace sewer and drainage lines in Samuel P. Taylor State Park, the state Office of Architecture and Construction said today.

Novatan Will Be Installed As Real Estate Board Chief

Ross Tankersley of Novato will head new officers and directors of the Marin County Real Estate Board to be installed Tuesday night.

Installation ceremonies wil be held at an informal dinner dance at Peacock Gap Country Club at 8 p.m. and will be directed by James Gallagher of San Anselmo, regional vice president of the California Real Estate Association.

Tankersley, new board president, has been active in Marin County real estate for 10 years and is the owner of Tankersley Realty, Novato. A native of Oklahoma, he attended schools in that state and later spent 20 years in the Air Force. He served eight years at several California bases, including Hamilton Air Force Base. He attended the Army Language School in Monterey and spent 39 months duty in Central America.

Installed with Tankersley will be Robert Roumiguiere, vice president; William Lewis, secretary, and Jane Fairchild, treasurer. Elizabeth Broman will be installed as chairman of the women's division; Carolyn Jaffrey, vice chairman, and Ezilda Torre, secretary-treasurer.

Serving as directors for 1968 are Arthur Hofmann, John Novak, B. D. Schulz, W. Bruce Shafer and Harold Valceschini.

Mill Valley Planners To Select Chairman

The Mill Valley Planning Commission will elect a chairman and vice chairman for 1968 at 8 p.m. Monday in the city council chamber.

Hearings set include two lot split requests by Martha Foss Forsyth to split a parcel west of 110 Myrtle Avenue into four lots and by Thomas C. Nelson Jr. to create two lots of one at 60 Mirabel Avenue.

Art Doctor Frank Dorland At Work

See Page M2

Beneath The Grime Of Old Paintings

By ALAN JONES

Frank Dorland is part doctor, part lawyer, a large part detective and more than a little crusader.

The patients at his Panoramic Highway home overlooking Mill Valley are some of the most valued paintings in the western United States. Dorland, who is aided by his wife at the work, is one of the nation's handful of art conservators — a profession that goes considerably beyond the routine cleaning or repainting of a damaged painting.

Repainting, in fact, is one of the last things a conservator wants to do — the artist's work is to be preserved, not improved. Dorland has spent a good part of his life correcting botchwork done by art "restorers" who painted over "bad spots" on valuable old canvases.

THE BAD spots most often are the result of neglect or improper care by the owner, and frequently can be remedied by skillful cleaning alone.

Mistreatment of valuable paintings is not restricted to private owners. Most museums treat their acquisitions shamefully, according to Dorland, and only a handful take the simple steps needed to guard their works against the ravages of time.

All that's needed, Dorland says, is for paintings to be properly cleaned, then a layer of wax and varnish applied to seal out the air and moisture which damage paintings. A proper airtight coating can keep a painting like new for 50 years between cleanings, and for hundreds of years in all.

BUT MUSEUMS which may spend millions acquiring art usually won't spend the relatively small sums needed to keep them up.

Why not? According to Dorland, it's because most museum directors haven't a clue about keeping art in good condition.

"They're very good at cocktail parties and getting along with patrons," Dorland says. But most of them simply don't know about art maintenance.

Rather than protect them, most museums will let their works go for years and "then choose a few old works to be restored at considerable cost."

PROTECTION and prevention would be cheaper and bring better results, he says.

Dorland is at pains to dispel some public myths about fine art and restoration.

First myth is that "Old Masters" are dark, dingy paintings beautifully drawn but abysmally colored. Not so, and Dorland proves it every time he goes to work on an old painting soiled by years of oxidation, soot and indiscriminate care.

DEMONSTRATING recently for a class of Mills College art seniors, he took a darkened turn-of-the-century copy of "The Horse Fair" and in a few minutes restored a portion of it to its original almost-white color, using an acetone-mineral spirits solution on a cotton swab and gently rolling off the accumulated layers of varnish and grime.

Cleaning was easy because the proper sorts of varnish, easily removable, had been applied in years past. With some paintings of past centuries, other preservatives have been used that can take weeks to remove. But when a painting can be properly cleaned, the colors will stand out as brightly as anything painted this year.

Another myth is that art restoration and cleaning is an arcane craft, practiced by men who jealously hand on trade secrets to proteges or carry

MILLS COLLEGE seniors Linda Houghton, center, and Francisca de Larios learn some of the fundamentals of the proper cleaning of paintings. Their instructor is Frank Dorland, Mill Valley art conservator. An acetone-coated swab being wielded so carefully by Miss Houghton is revealing underneath a dingy brown surface accumulated through the years the bright beauty of the original painting.

"Why Did My Permanent-Press Suit Cause a Rash and Itching?"

This problem has increased since the new "permanent" or better-called "durable press" garments have come on the market. The manufacturing processes of the various resin-finishes are too involved to relate here.

Essentially, the reason is this. In "durable press" finishes the resin finish is "cured" usually with some type of acid, or a salt that forms an acid at high temperatures. Once the resin is cured in the fabric, it is desirable to wash the fabric to remove the excess acid. In the early "wash and wear" finishes this was done. But in the newer "durable press" fabrics, the delayed application of the resin finish makes washing undesirable. Therefore most "durable press" fabrics come to the customer with excessive acid in the fabric. The theory is that the customer, himself, will wash it out. But some of these garments are not washed, but drycleaned. The resin also decomposes forming formaldehyde, which irritates the skin.

That's a long way of saying that "durable press" garments should be washed at least once before being worn, just to make certain the excess acid catalyst has been removed.

WITH THE HELP of a binocular microscope, art conservator Frank Dorland, working in his laboratory in his home on the Panoramic Highway, checks to make certain that only dirt and varnish are being removed as he works on this turn-of-the-century copy of the painting, "The Horse Fair." Pollutants can blacken a painting in a very few years, if it has not been properly sealed against the air, Dorland warns.

Art Conservator Rescues Beauty Of Fine Paintings

them to the grave.

"THERE IS no secret in this business," Dorland says flatly. "If anyone tells you he has a secret process, it means he doesn't know what he's doing but doesn't want to tell you so."

Museums don't allow restorers to work on their paintings without first knowing exactly what will be done to them and what processes will be used.

The detective work required of an art conservator can lead down some strange byways. On occasion, examination has shown a painting might be a fake, or a painting on top of another painting.

IN SUCH cases, forgery might be involved, or some latter-day artist may have tried to improve or change the original for some reason.

All such trickery comes to light in the Dorland laboratory, which is filled with gadgets that would do a spy movie proud.

There is photo equipment, including ultra-violet and infra-red lights, a dental drill and hand tools, microscopes to examine the crystal structure of paints, centuries-old books about painting, vials of powdered pigments, bottles of pure wax and varnishes, hot plates, a heat table and other paraphernalia.

THE FIRST step in treating any painting is to photograph and examine the work closely to see what can be done. Then a contract is negotiated, unless the Dorlands decide not to take the job. Now the real work begins.

In one case, a preliminary X-ray of a Mexican painting showed that the three horsemen in the foreground had been tampered with — they weren't a part of the original painting.

Painstaking cleaning and work with hand dental tools brought back the original painting of two men and two women on horseback, all landed gentry and evidently unacceptable to revolutionary Mexico. They were painted out and replaced by three revolutionaries with big hats and bandoliers slung over their shoulders.

BEFORE ANYTHING is done to the surface, the canvas is placed back to back with a new linen canvas, pre-stretched to take the strain while holding the old canvas flat. The two are sealed together by a coat of wax which will hold them permanently, yet will allow them to be separated by application of 165-degree heat.

Cleaning starts on the least important part of the painting, usually near an edge somewhere, so that if a mistake is made the least possible damage is done.

The painting has been examined first to see what varnishes and coatings are on it and what chemicals can be used to clean it safely.

ONCE CLEANED, the next step depends on the agreement with the owner. An Old Master may simply be sealed up again with protective coating, and with no attempt to repair damage.

In other cases, physical damage may be repaired and missing patches of paint carefully repainted. One painting on Dorland's wall was sat on at a cocktail party, leaving a large rip across a moonlit mission.

For repainting, Dorland uses the microscope to learn the types of pigment used, then uses identical ones in the repair work. This insures that the new and old paint will not color differently in future years. The paint is applied on a near-microscopic scale, using the dental drill to fill in much like filling a tooth.

FROM THE restorer's point of view, the best painting was done before the 18th Century. In the old days, painters were brought up from youth in the guild system, learning the technical end of painting as well as the artistic, such as grinding pigments and mixing their own paints. As a matter of course they used the best materials, handwoven canvas, pure pigments and oils, and good varnishes and waxes.

A painting of this sort can be restored to its original quality with no difficulty.

ART CONSERVATOR

His Job: To Undo Years Of Neglect

centuries, particularly Americans, used whatever materials were available, cheap paint and canvases and commercially-made materials produced for profit instead of quality and durability. Such stuff, no matter how good the art, is much harder to clean and restore.

THE GREATEST damage to paintings today is caused by smog, cigarette smoke and similar 20th Century air pollutants. Sulfides combine with the paint to darken it and the paint must often be desulfured to get the colors back.

One pernicious habit in times past was that in English estates, when the butler was assigned once a year to take a bucket of varnish around and slap a new coat onto the family gallery. The varnish, far from preserving the paintings, only sealed in each year's accumulation of soot and grime. The paintings usually darkened to unrecognizable respectability in a few years.

Paintings are not the only art works that suffer from neglect. Dorland can spread out photographs of several well-known statues in Golden Gate Park — Rodin's "Thinker," Fray Junipero Serra and Francis Scott Key — all blackened and streaked from pigeons, pollution and the salt-laden fog.

LETTING STATUES get in such condition is "disgraceful," Dorland says. "People can't be inspired by looking at something like that." And as it is with paintings, prevention is simple. The statues only need to be cleaned once and then protected with an annual coat of wax to seal out the air, he advises.

If art conservation is a traditional trade, Dorland comes by it in an appropriately traditional way. His grandfather was a photographer and a restorer of art and photographs in the Midwest. In the early days of photography, daguerrotypes and tintypes aged rapidly and needed restoring just like paintings.

Dorland planned to become a doctor, but found somewhere in pre-medical school he liked the art world better.

WHILE THERE are now one or two universities where art conservation is taught, there was none when the Dorlands started out. So instead, they toured all the major museums in the United States, visiting each one that had a cleaning and restoration laboratory to learn what they could.

To their surprise, they found only three or four museums had anything more than rudimentary equipment or understanding of the technique. They learned what they could from these outposts and went into business on their own.

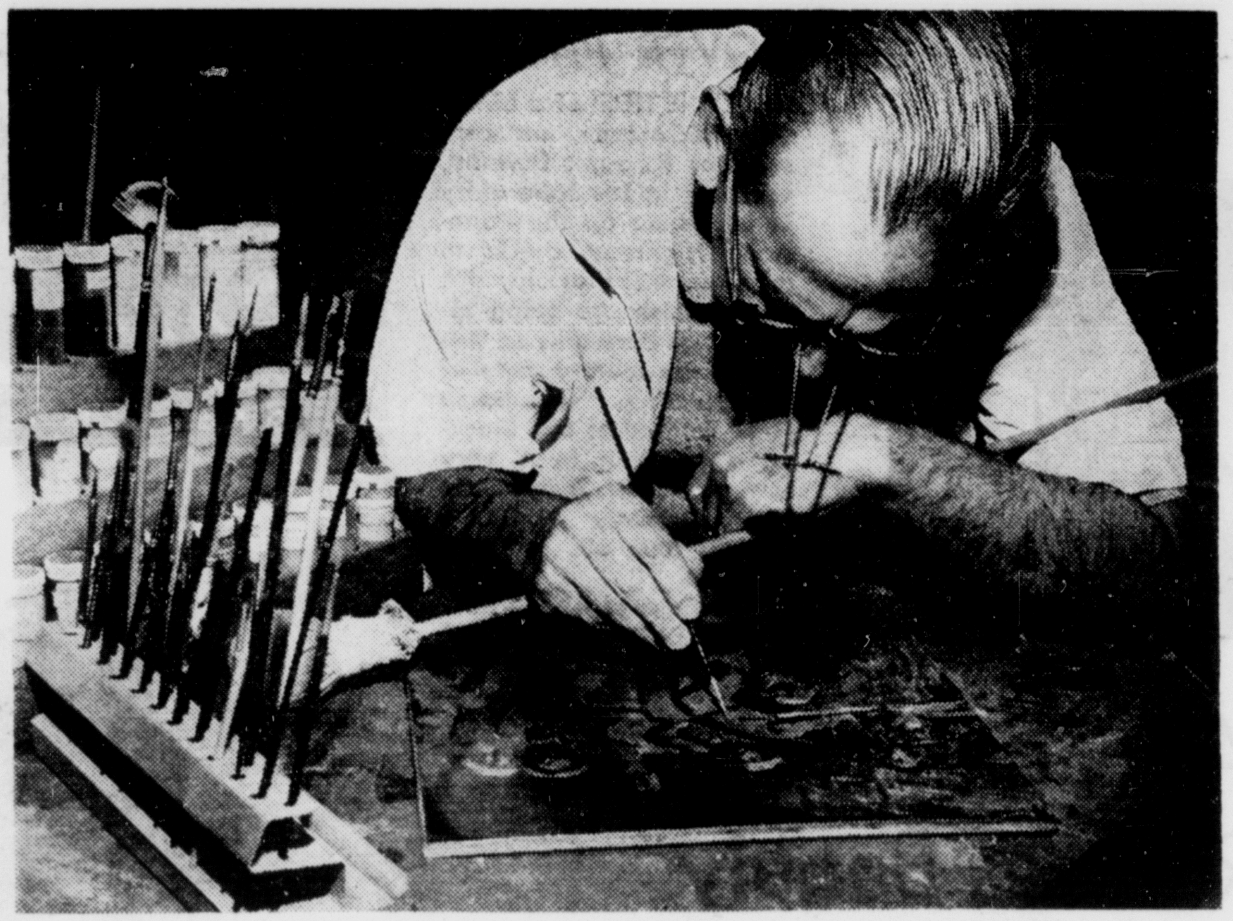
They are now consultants to several Bay Area museums, and have often been called on to authenticate or evaluate such internationally known works as the "Virgin of Kazan," the ikon displayed at the New York World's Fair along with Michelangelo's "Pieta" from the Vatican.

HOW DOES Dorland relax from his painstaking job? By painting, what else? But his painting looks nothing like the traditional representational works he restores. His painting is fluid and non-representational, for good reason.

"After I spent all day working on an eyebrow or a hand," he says, "I don't want to go paint another hand, I want to express an emotion, and I don't want to spend five days doing it."

The results are small, often brilliantly-colored paintings with a freedom from form that is the antithesis of the paintings lining his laboratory walls.

What sounds like a busman's holiday really isn't that at all.



FRANK DORLAND uses a mahlstick as a rest as he "inpaints," the technique by which paint of the proper type and color is used to eliminate visually, without repainting, a blemish on a painting. The painting showing a boisterous party of 49ers is the property of the Oakland Art Museum.

A DENTAL ENGINE and handpiece are used by Frank Dorland to reproduce the original texture of brushmarks on repaired areas of this painting. The dental machine has long been a favorite tool of art restorers.

INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL cartoonist Paul Miller has drawn his concept of the 1930 scene when underworld gunman Vincent (Pegleg) Lucich, having already shot and killed bootlegging figure Melvern (Nick) Sturtevant on a lonely West Marin beach, then turned his pistol on a terrified Grace Berri and seriously wounded her. Mrs. Berri escaped the killer in the darkness and lived to testify against him at one of Marin County's most sensational murder trials.

A Sensational Murder Case In Marin

Gangland Killing In Prohibition Era Attracted Widespread Public Interest

By FLORENCE DONNELLY
Independent-Journal Historian

A hired gun, gangland vengeance, murder on a lonely beach, a beautiful woman — all this sounds like a plot a television writer might concoct. But it is all part of a real episode that took place in Marin during the violent prohibition era.

Rum-runners made fortunes at the time when manufacture and sale of liquor were illegal.

The illicit goods were brought by boat to landings on isolated ranches on the ocean and bay shores of the county, and taken by truck to San Francisco. Moonshiners made hay as well as liquor.

IT WAS SAID that some of the ranchers were aware of the landings on their property, but were silenced by a share of the profits. Others, no doubt, were unaware of the nocturnal traffic.

A telephone call would suffice to bring home delivery of liquor.

Speakeasies flourished, too. There was an aura of mystery about them and they were operated much like a private club. If you knew the right people you were admitted without question. A certain knock would be the "open, Sesame."

The bootlegging establishments were everywhere in Marin, in basements of private homes and in backrooms of restaurants. Hard liquor and wine were served in cups in many eating places.

THERE WERE many whispered references to the landings of illegal spirits along Marin's shores. However, no one dared to report what they knew to federal agents.

Once, a 55-foot powerboat was found floating off Point Reyes. All identification marks had been removed from the craft. The name had been sheared off by an ax. The boat was believed to be a rum-runner craft which had been hijacked, the crew murdered and the bodies thrown overboard.

However, one story of gangland vengeance in Marin was unfolded before the public because a brave woman lived to tell a weird story.

ON MAY 21, 1930, Melvern G. (Nick) Sturtevant of Sausalito, along with other men including several from this county, was charged by government agents with operating a large still on a Hicks Valley ranch in Marin County. He appeared in federal court in San Francisco, pleaded guilty and testified against his former associates.

While the federal jury was deliberating the case, Vincent (Pegleg) Lucich approached Sturtevant and his companion, Mrs. Grace Berri, telling them he was a hired gunman who wasn't being paid enough money by his gang. He asked Sturtevant to join him in hijacking a cargo of rum which he said was to be landed at Tomales Bay.

"Pegleg" invited Sturtevant and Mrs. Berri to go with him to view the place where the supposed rum-runner was to land. As their automobile traveled north, they talked about the case in the federal court, speculated on what the jury's verdict would be and laughed about the consternation Sturtevant's testimony had caused his former associates.

WHEN THEY arrived at the spot on the bay where Pegleg said the rum-runner would bring in his cargo, the three got out of the automobile and walked along the beach. Then as they returned to get into the car, Pegleg whipped a pistol from his holster and shot Sturtevant in the back twice.

As Sturtevant fell to the sand dead, Mrs. Berri was transfixed with horror. Pegleg next fired at her, the bullet hitting her in the breast. She fell but as Pegleg hobbled over to her, she scrambled away. His artificial leg and the darkness of the evening aided her in eluding the killer.

Mrs. Berri crawled to a ranch house near Dillon's Beach, gasped a few words about the killing and, suffering from heavy loss of blood, became unconscious. She was rushed to a hospital in Petaluma. Next day Mrs. Berri was near death from a massive hemorrhage.

HARRY WILLIAMS, then deputy coroner, and now owner of a San Rafael funeral home, brought Sturtevant's body back to San Rafael. He notified the Marin County sheriff's office and San Francisco police. Dr. John H. Kuser performed the autopsy on Sturtevant's body.

The death car, with an empty holster, was found abandoned on a Sausalito street. With Charles W. Dullea, captain of detectives in San Francisco, Williams searched Pegleg Lucich's room in San Francisco. They found a quantity of deadly cyanide.

Black headlines screamed the newspaper stories of the killing in Marin. Pegleg surrendered to the police, claiming he had killed in self defense. He explained the cyanide in his room by saying he used it to harden steel.

MRS. BERRI remained in the hospital where she was kept under constant guard by federal officers. Two attempts to kill her had been reported and several threats had been voiced against her life. Finally, the doctors agreed Mrs. Berri was sufficiently recovered to testify in court.

On June 26, 1930, the jury was chosen. On it were Elmer Ackley, Anna Bailey, Volney E. Howard, George W. Brooks, Leland Yarnell, Mary Seymour, Clifford Bartlett, Louis Massey, Katherine Tovani, Ralston L. White, Grace Steinbrun and John Huntley.

I was a cub reporter at the Independent-Journal when I was assigned to "cover" the murder trial of Vincent (Pegleg) Lucich. I wrote of many trials but this was one which had all the elements that intrigue the public. It received columns of space in the metropolitan dailies as well as the local press.

THE CASE was bizarre in several respects.

There was no sympathy for either the victim or the accused murderer. Pegleg had a police record dating back to 1911. In addition to the charge of running a still, Mel Sturtevant was alleged to have been guilty of robbery on the high seas scuttling a ship and, among other offenses, horse-stealing. He was particularly disliked by the people of the county because he was known to be a philanderer who had been responsible for the breakup of several marriages.

In Sausalito he was known to have consorted with gangsters, associates of such notorious characters as "Baby Face" Nelson, who was later a member of John Dillinger's infamous gang.

JUDGE EDWARD Butler presided at the trial. Henry Greer, the district attorney, later county superintendent of schools, presented the evidence for the prosecution.

Pegleg Lucich was seated at a table with his very able lawyer, Thomas Boyd. Long before Judge Butler came from his chambers to the bench, the courtroom was filled with spectators, the morbid and the simply curious, housewives and business people.

The district attorney called a succession of witnesses including Dr. Kuser and Harry Williams, who testified on the course of the bullets in Sturtevant's body. It was also revealed for the first time that horse hair had been stuffed into Sturtevant's throat.

A BALLISTICS expert gave a scientific analysis of bullets which had been fired.

A youth said he had seen Lucich come from under a bridge in San Anselmo the night of the killing. The supposition was that the accused man had hidden his pistol there.

There was standing room only

HENRY GREER was the district attorney who successfully prosecuted Vincent (Pegleg) Lucich for first degree murder in one of Marin County's most sensational trials in 1930. Greer also served the people of Marin County as their superintendent of schools. Like most of the principals in the Lucich case, he is now deceased.

as Mrs. Berri, who had been brought to the courthouse by ambulance and into the courtroom by wheelchair, flanked by a bodyguard of federal agents, told her story of the grim events on May 21.

A SLIGHT, beautiful woman, she spoke in a low voice. She was asked by Greer if she recognized anyone present in the courtroom as the person who had fired on Sturtevant and her. Her shudder of revulsion was plainly visible as she looked at and pointed out Lucich. He stared back, showing no emotion.

The crowd had another thrill when Sturtevant's bloody jacket, with two bullet holes in the back, was exhibited and admitted as evidence for the prosecution.

The spectators buzzed with excitement when a group of rough-looking characters, each wearing a white carnation boutonniere, filed into the courtroom. Several were known to be citizens of the underworld.

Why had they come? Perhaps to intimidate the jury. Judge Butler, who always insisted on silence in his courtroom, threatened to clear it unless the crowd was quiet.

QUICKLY MORE officers came into the room. They watched the carnation-wearers closely.

When the day's session was over the mysterious visitors left without incident.

District Attorney Greer contended that Lucich was a paid killer for a gang of bootleggers, who had operated for several years on the coast of North Marin. Boyd made an eloquent plea for Lucich, protesting his innocence. But the cross-examination of Mrs. Berri and other witnesses failed to disprove their testimony.

LUCICH WAS found guilty of first degree murder.

Defense Attorney Boyd then made a dramatic plea for a new trial, saying a mystery witness of the killing had been found. However, the verdict stood and Lucich began serving his sentence July 14, 1930. He was released on parole July 14, 1947.

There were several matters that could not be introduced during the murder trial.

It was rumored that Lucich had served time at Folsom; also that his right leg had been amputated below the knee after he was injured in a machine gun battle when he was on a hijacking raid of a truckload of illegal liquor at Half Moon Bay.

THE PRINCIPALS in that sensational trial of 1930 have now, for the most part, faded from the public eye.

There were reports that a love affair had developed between Mrs. Berri and one of her federal guards during the trial and that they were married subsequently. But this was rumor of the unverified kind that often arises as the aftermath of a sensational crime.

Creative Remodeling Receives Recognition

Marin Projects Transform Home And Garage Into New Structures

Marinites are accustomed to finding newly constructed homes in their county pictured in national magazines or listed among the honor-winners in national architectural and building competitions.

Reconstruction projects — homes that have been expanded or rehabilitated to "showplace" status — are less frequently encountered.

But they are to be found, too. And they represent a special demonstration of the ingenuity of which Bay Area architects are capable.

TWO RECENT illustrations of major remodeling designs with especially happy results are:

The Mill Valley home of architect Barry G. Smith which won a Gold Nugget Award from American Builder Magazine.

And an unused Sausalito garage remodeled according to the plans of architect Ervin J. Bell into an attractive guest and garden house. It was featured in House Beautiful's 1967-68 fall-winter home remodeling issue, and will also be featured in American Builder.

HIS STUCCO HOUSE as originally built opened to a side yard of scattered shrubbery. When Mill Valley architect Barry G. Smith decided to remodel his home, he hit upon that area as the logical site for a patio. And he provided a fence for the privacy he wanted for himself and his guests.

BEFORE ITS recent "beauty treatment," architect Smith's home was a 1920 bungalow of undistinguished appearance, heavily stuccoed and failing to take adequate advantage of the view potential of the surrounding forested terrain.

Smith worked out a remodeling design that made extensive use of natural redwood siding that integrated well with the wooded environment.

Rows of tall redwood casements admit light and permit views of the nearby creek and trees.

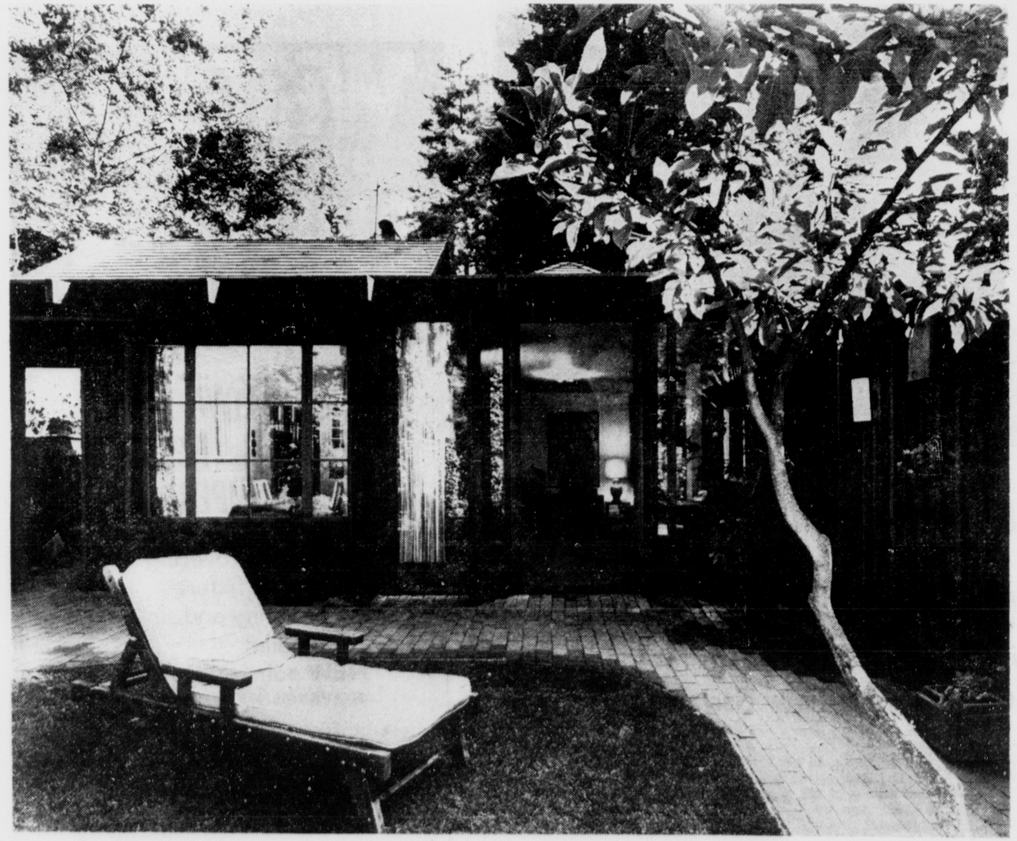
THE REMODELED Smith home was used extensively by the California Redwood Association in its continuing advertising program based upon the theme: "I am an architect, this is my home, I built it of redwood." In conjunction with those advertisements, it appeared in such publications as House Beautiful, House & Garden, Better Homes & Gardens, Home Modernizing Guide and Building Products Guide.

Ervin Bell, who provided the plans for the remodeling of the Sausalito garage into a guest and garden house, had previously designed the principal home for the owners.

Thus he was in a special position to blend the addition perfectly with the main house.

BELL, TOO, emphasized redwood so that it becomes as much a part of the landscape as the surrounding trees.

The two projects serve as exhibits of how the tastefully planned and expertly executed remodeling program can pay dividends in good living and in artistic satisfaction that are the equal to any new construction.



BARRY SMITH'S plans for the remodeling of his Mill Valley home called for the extension of the old dining room walls three feet into the side yard so that they are now flush with the windowed wall of the rear bedroom. Then he added a redwood fence that integrated with the house's board and batten redwood siding. Portions of the original roof are still visible from the private patio.

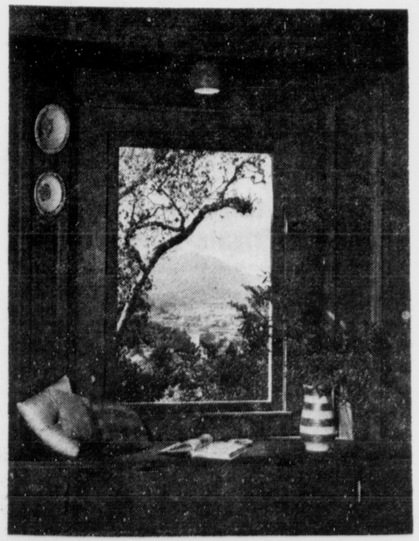
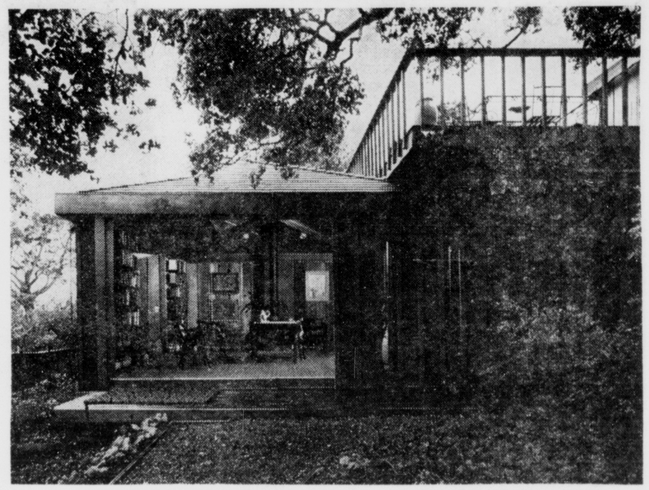
THE PHOTOGRAPH at top shows an unused garage located at the rear of a new residence in Sausalito, and without access to the street. The lower photo shows the same structure after it had been remodeled, according to the plans of architect Ervin J. Bell, and given a whole new relationship to the adjoining home. Tall casements allow light to penetrate when the sliding wall is closed. The redwood lumber of the little guest house was finished on the exterior with "Woodlife" to perfect its harmonization with the main structure.

Marin Living

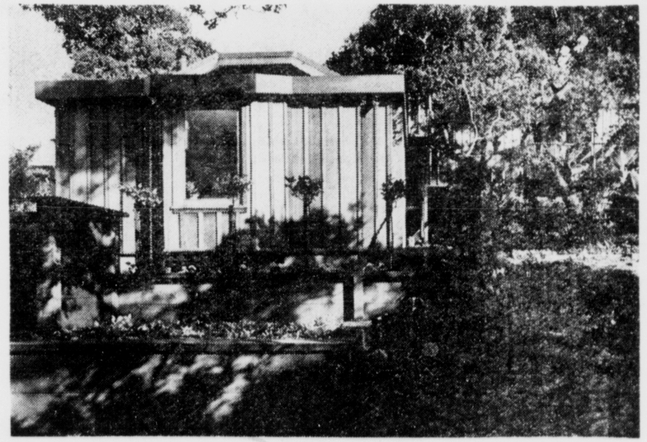
FROM an inviting window seat, at right, the occupants of the guest and garden house on the Sausalito hillside can enjoy a fine view of the town below and of the mountain in the distance. All walls, mullions and built-in cabinets within the guest home were specified by architect Ervin J. Bell as redwood, the principal material of the adjacent main house which he had previously designed. The "little gem" that was once an ugly duckling garage has been honored by House Beautiful magazine and is to be featured in a second publication, American Builder. It is a striking example of the creative approach to the remodeling of a structure.

(Photos by Karl Riek)

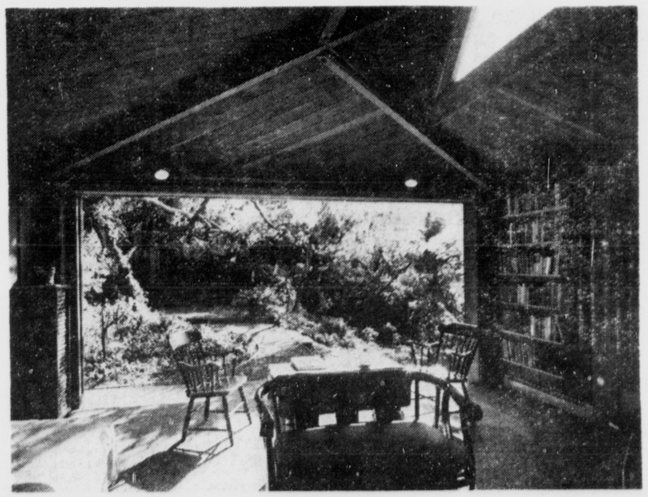




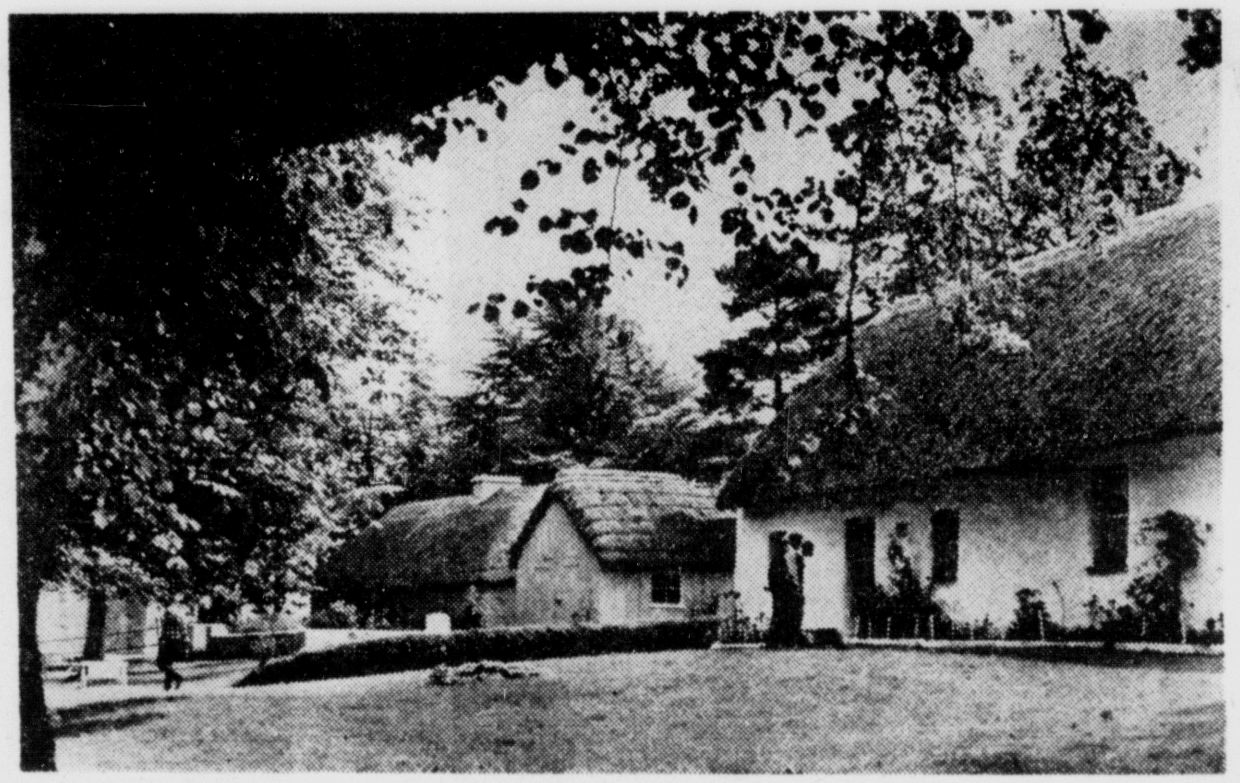
THE SLIDING WALL of the guest and garden house designed by architect Ervin J. Bell is open here, to provide a perfect "sun trap" while still offering excellent protection from the wind.



THIS VIEW SHOWS how well the re-designed garage turned guest house now fits into its hillside and garden setting. It has become part of the landscape.



BOARD AND BATTEN redwood paneling of the same pattern as the exterior siding was finished with "Clear Rez" in the guest house interior. The ceiling is three-by-six redwood "Lock-Deck," angled for additional interest.



THE OPPORTUNITY to move back into history is one of the enticements offered by Ireland to its visitors. Experiences such as a medieval banquet served in historic Bunratty Castle by pretty Irish lassies, left, or a stop for afternoon tea in the kitchen of a thatch-roofed Irish farmhouse, above, are part of low-cost stopover tours available from Shannon International Airport.

Return To Medieval Splendor

Ireland Offers Its Visitors Chance To Relive History

The Travel Pages

With the devaluation of sterling, European-bound tourists are finding that a one-day "medieval tour" from Shannon, Ireland, is more than ever one of travel's biggest bargains.

Operating during the off-season for the first time, the price has now been reduced to $18, which includes room, bath, full breakfast at a first class hotel, extensive sightseeing and a sumptuous banquet with entertainment at the 15th Century Bunratty Castle.

FOR THOSE who like to remain slightly longer in hospitable Ireland, three and four-day stopover tours are available, costing $28 and $39.50 respectively. Air fare gives the traveler the privilege of a free stop-off at Shannon enroute to or from the continent.

During the 24-hour excursion, the tourist visits Bunratty Folk Park for tea in the kitchen of an Irish farmhouse, and is taken to a typical Irish pub for a pint and conversation with the natives. A visit to the well-preserved 12th Century Quin Abbey is also included.

At Ennis he is treated to an exhibition of step-dancing and a glass of Irish coffee.

AMERICANS are cautioned that this brew is something more than the beverage of that name they encounter in the U.S. Its billowy, whip cream head gives Irish coffee an inviting, dessert-like appearance. Actually, it has a special ingredient — potent domestic whiskey.

Highlight of the tour is the visit to Bunratty Castle for an authentic medieval banquet that includes capon, vegetable broth, salamagundy, a 15th Century dessert called syllabub and the medieval beverage mead.

The atmosphere is as genuine as the food.

Only candlelight is used in the dining hall, the hostesses are dressed in 15th Century costumes, entertainment is by the Bunratty singers, and eating is with the same utensils used in the castle 400 years ago.

AFTER THE evening banquet, participants return to their hotel for the night.

The next morning is spent sight-seeing around Limerick City on the River Shannon.

A special folder describing the Medieval Tours is available free from the Irish Tourist Board, 590 Fifth Avenue, New York City 10036.

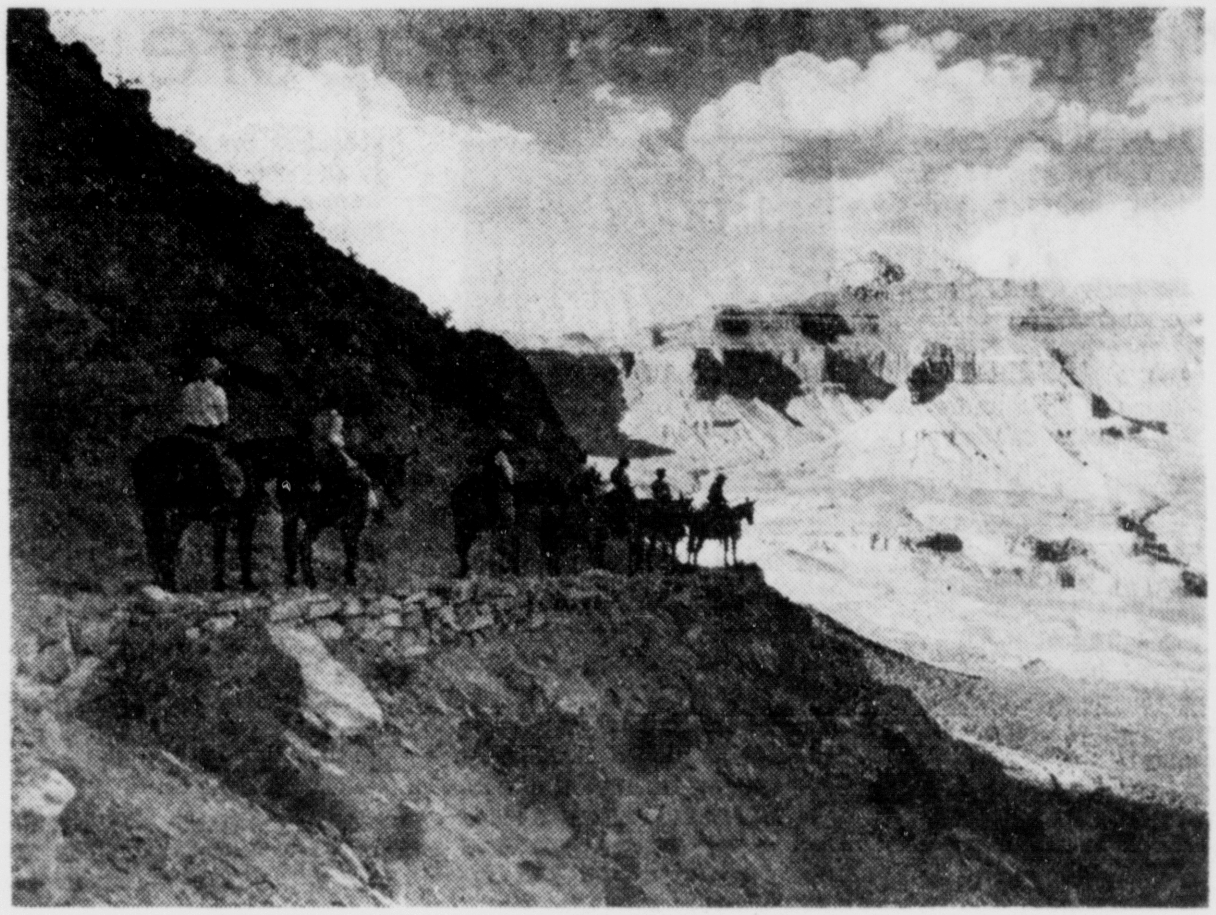
The Canyon Is Grandest In Winter

Here's One National Park That Is Open Year Around



Many people think the only time to visit a national park is during the summer.

In truth, many parks are closed in winter. But the winter traveler who has visited the South Rim of Grand Canyon National Park, which is open all year, has experienced a special treat.

Summer crowds are gone and he is free to enjoy the splendor at his leisure.

SNOWFALL at the South Rim of Grand Canyon is generally moderate and highways leading to and within the park are cleared of snow as soon as it falls.

The North Rim, higher and colder, is closed from mid-October until May.

At no other time is the scenery at the Canyon more magnificent than in winter. Visitors on hand for a snowfall are fortunate, indeed. Powdered snow etching Canyon buttes and temples, junipers and pines, makes the kaleidoscopic colors even more brilliant.

ALL ACTIVITIES available to summer vacationists are offered the off-season visitor.

Sure-footed mules make the daily trip into the Canyon itself. Hopi Indians perform their ceremonial dances and luxurious motor coaches transport sightseeing parties along the canyon rim. There is hiking, riding, fishing and lectures by park naturalists.

Of the facilities that concessionaire Fred Harvey operates on the South Rim, the trail trips down into the Canyon on the famous "educated mules" are the most fascinating. The experience is guaranteed to become a back-home conversation piece for years.

FROM THIS vantage point, the amateur "mule skinner" can really appreciate the Canyon in its many moods — the plant and animal life, the changing climate and the geology of the walls.

The mules carried their first passengers back in 1905. Trails used today are ones cut by Indians and prospectors in the late 1800s.

Mules are used instead of horsed because of their endurance and patience. The mule is also solicitous of its own skin and seldom takes chances which would involve its own safety — and that of its rider.

TWO MULE trips are offered the Canyon visitor. A one-day trip to Plateau Point, overlooking the Colorado River, costs $12, and includes a guide and box lunch.

Then there is the two-day trip to Phantom Ranch, the Canyon hideaway where you enjoy a ranch-style dinner, and, if hearty, take a dip in the spring-fed swimming pool. Including guide service, mule, meals and overnight accommodations at the ranch, the trip costs $35.

For those whose winter vacation plans include a trip to Phoenix of Tucson, it is an easy drive on to the Canyon. Four hours from Phoenix, via State Highway 69 to Cordes Junction, State 79 (Interstate 17) to Flagstaff, State 164 to State 64 and 64 on to Grand Canyon.

Bonanza Airlines offers daily flights to Grand Canyon Airport, eight miles from Grand Canyon. A bus from the Canyon meets all flights.

A TWO OR three day stopover is suggested. Accommodations at Grand Canyon Village include El Tovar Hotel and Bright Angel Lodge.

AN AWESOME SIGHT in any season, the Grand Canyon takes on a special grandeur when winter cloaks it with a white coating of powdered snow. The national park and accommodations on its South Rim are open all year. Also on duty through the winter are the sure-footed Fred Harvey mules, top photo, that carry the more adventurous park visitors down into the canyon's depths.

NOTES TO TRAVEL BY

Father Of Singapore

RAFFLES by Maurice Collis; John Day, 228 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by James E. Williams.

England's rise to a world power in the early 19th Century is a golden chapter in the history of the once mighty British Empire. And a segment of its success belongs to Sir Stamford Raffles, the founder of Singapore.

The story of Raffles is one of the most interesting in English history. Here was a man who through sheer force of character opened the Far East to the Western world. But at the time of his heroic act, he was rebuked for paying too much for what has become a giant among the world's seaports — Singapore.

In all of his endeavors in the Far East his one big foe was the bureaucracy of the staid East India Co., the powerful firm in which he launched his career as a clerk.

Reviews Of New Reading

By the age of 24, Raffles was an assistant secretary at Penang off Malaya. He was to know many heartaches, however, both personal and political, before his death 21 years later.

The assignment to Penang was the break he needed. And before the founding in 1819 of Singapore, he had helped play a large part in the capture of Java from the Dutch and had secured his role as a statesman.

He was humane, forceful, but considerate at all times—probably the one trait that kept him from a higher spot in England's history.

While the founding of Singapore was his best known feat, he was also well respected as a zoologist, botanist, anthropologist, archaeologist, geologist and historian. For his history of Java he was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society.

Some historians feel Raffles' untimely death at 45 robbed England of greater achievements from the explorer-statesman.

But as author Maurice Collis points out: What more could he have done?

"He had opened the door, had pointed the path, had provided the idea and performed the act. Singapore stood."

Indeed, Raffles had set the stage for a new Asia. He had broken the Dutch hold and had opened the way for a new chapter in the world trade.

Here are three relatively painless, sometimes enthralling, books for the layman and pre-college student.

Dr. Von Braun is the director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's George C. Marshall Center, and was a pioneer in German and U. S. space programs. His book compiles a series of articles written for Popular Science magazine, updating them in orderly fashion.

He outlines problems of space flight, goals of lunar and planetary exploration, and tells how United States ingenuity proposes to do the tasks. It's an excellent briefing on NASA methods and attitudes.

Mrs. Hyde is an award-winning writer of children's science books, concerned in this volume with giving teen-agers and older pre-teens a broadly painted picture of man's search for knowledge inside the earth, in its seas, in Antarctica and outside the earth.

Corliss' book introduces the layman to the "when did it all begin — where will it end" questions cosmology tries to answer. It discusses the meaning of Einstein's theories of relativity, the intriguing puzzles of Mars' "canals" and Jupiter's wandering red spot, the detection of quasars and other main targets of the hour for researchers.

All three books are worth the time needed to read them, none is obscure or math-laden, and the only caution I would say is that nothing goes out of date so fast these days as a work on the state of man's knowledge of the universe. The sketches in Von Braun's book are poor, those in Mrs. Hyde's book more artistic but less informative.

'Style Book' For Authors And Editors

A PRACTICAL SELF GUIDE FOR AUTHORS AND EDITORS by Margaret Nicholson; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 143 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

Anyone who has attempted to assemble a "style book" for a newspaper can testify that it is impossible to foresee all of the punctuation, abbreviation, capitalization and grammatical questions that arise in writing and publishing.

Margaret Nicholson, editor of Fowler's "Dictionary of American-English Usage," has been confronted with the same situation here in compiling this small guide to manuscript preparation and editing.

She has done as well as possible, concentrating on the basics, and duly noting the many differing practices of the various publishing houses. Her book should be of greater interest to the writer, especially the beginner, than to the editor, who, it is to be hoped, has mastered these fundamentals before being elevated to that status.

In addition to the best accepted rules on punctuation and related tools, the book offers the novice author a clearer idea as to just what his responsibilities are toward the manuscript until it appears in print, and how to fulfill them.

Incidentally, as Miss Nicholson repeats, the watchword in writing style is "consistency."

Preserving The Material Of Which History Is Made

WHO CONQUERED CALIFORNIA? by Simeon Ide; Rio Grande Press, 376 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

William B. Ide was the leader of the Bear Flag revolt that took Sonoma when the United States was not yet quite ready to take California. After his death, his brother, Simeon, celebrated his accomplishment in a pair of books, "A Biographical Sketch of the Life of William B. Ide" and "Who Conquered California?"

The two volumes, long out of print, have now been bound together by Rio Grande Press of Glorieta, N.M., in an offset reprint from the originals.

Both Ides considered the accomplishment of the Bear Flaggers much greater than it was in fact. Both were given to hyperbole — William, whose letters and papers are freely quoted, more so than his brother. Their joint account of the Bear Flag Rebellion is in every line that of protagonist and propagandist.

But if not history, it is definitely the stuff of which history is made, and Rio Grande Press is to be congratulated for preserving — in a nice imitation leather binding — these valuable contemporary accounts of the time when at least a little piece of California briefly flew the flag of an independent republic.

A Readable History Of Golden State

WEST OF THE WEST by Robert Kirsch and William S. Murphy; Dutton, 505 pages, $10. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

Although the title may be a bit confusing, "West of the West" is a history of California — which is, after all, west of the West that most chroniclers of Americana have written about.

It is a rather different kind of history. Authors Robert Kirsch and William Murphy have drawn heavily from contemporary sources to describe the events they relate — except in dealing with the earliest Spanish explorations, which they sketch in an opening chapter.

There are, for instance, accounts by privateer Woodes Rogers, explorer George Vancouver, the Russian visitor Otto von Kotzebue, pioneers James Ohio Pattie and John Bidwell, and many more down to Frank Norris and Stuart Daggett.

The volume encompasses the whole period from the earliest Spaniards and Sir Francis Drake down to and including the San Francisco earthquake. It is not only excellent source material; the accounts are so well chosen and edited and the connecting accounts by Kirsch and Murphy (both members of the editorial staff of the Los Angeles Times) so well done that the book also makes a highly readable history in itself.

There are a few slips.

For instance, Kirsch and Murphy identify the Russian settlements at Bodega and Fort Ross as being one and the same, unaware that they were some 20 miles apart. But the errors are minor, and the book as a whole is an excellent job.

Must For Students

THE PALACE OF PLEASURE by William Painter; Dover three volumes, 364, 428 and 432 pages, $2.25 each. Reviewed by Laurel Shapiro.

In 1850 William Painter put together this collection of 101 stories, making available in English tales from the Decameron, the Italian "novelle," and Greek and Roman tales. Considered to be one of the most influential books in English literature, it was the source the Elizabethan masters turned to first for plots and settings and was responsible for the strong Italian swerve English literature took at that time.

Dover's reprint (the unaltered, unabridged 1890 edition) is surely a must for the student of literature. Each of the 101 stories is helpfully listed by Painter's source as well as the original source. Parallel and derivative works are noted.

A Radical Takes A Look At The Roots Of Racial Violence

By DON KEOWN

PRELUDE TO RIOT by Paul Jacobs; Random House, 298 pages, $5.95.

The reason the cities have been so ineffective in their attempts to solve the crisis of the poor and the racial minorities is because they have adopted a fragmented, rather than a comprehensive, approach. And have done that only half-heartedly.

So asserts San Francisco writer Paul Jacobs, a self-professed radical, in his provocative book "Prelude to Riot."

A leadership void, the basic racist attitude of white America and an absence of sympathy, even an antagonism, for the poor are all factors contributing to the failure of the urban areas to halt the worsening plight of their poverty-stricken.

To arrive at his contentions, Jacobs has made a study of Los Angeles which he feels has been the victim of particularly cynical and unfeeling leadership from its present mayor and its late police chief.

In his book, he describes how he found in Los Angeles a city in which the police are untrained in human and community relations and frequently bigoted, in which the welfare program is understaffed and underfinanced and unsympathetic toward its clients, in which the employment programs are not designed to aid those most in need of such help, in which segregated housing is the accepted way of life, in which health and medical services available to the ghetto dwellers are inadequate and difficult to obtain, in which the schools offer inequitable educational opportunities and foster a feeling of inferiority and resentment among the minorities.

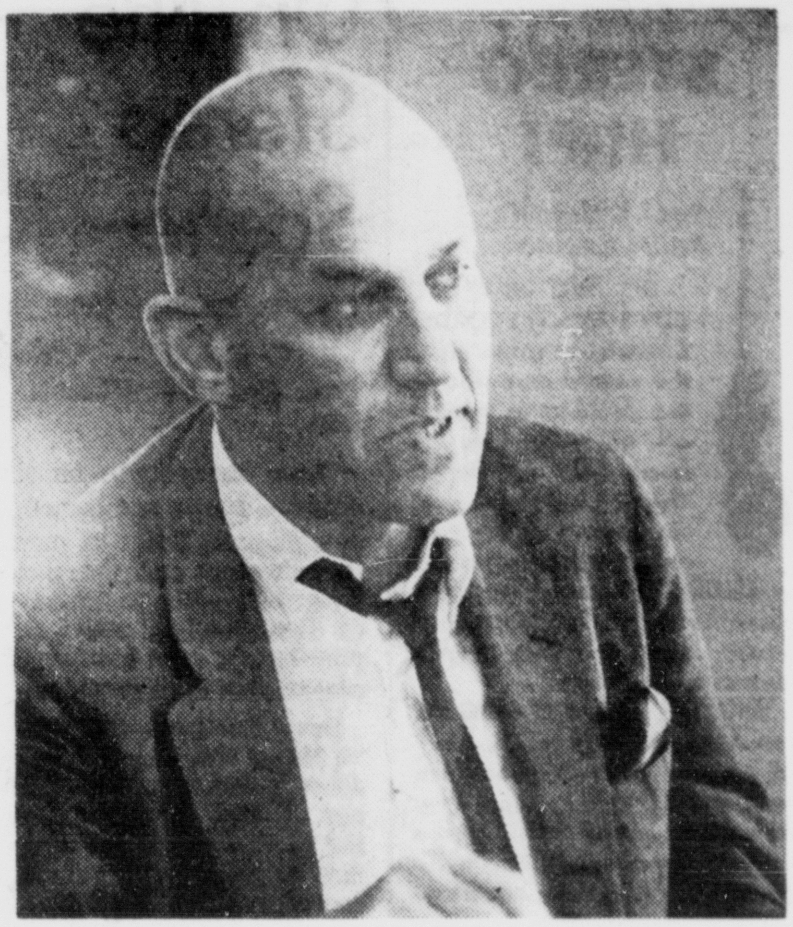
Finally, he attacks the "post-Watts" investigation and findings of the commission headed by John A. McCone as the kind of self-serving, self-absolving endeavor one should expect when representatives of those largely responsible for the creation of the conditions that have led to violence are called upon to analyze the debris.

Finally, Jacobs makes it clear that he does not believe the situations he has uncovered and reported to be the exclusive problems of Los Angeles. They are present in all our cities, he warns. In some they have already exploded into Watts-like riots. In others, the dynamite could go off at any time.

Jacobs is not always as explicit as many might wish in suggesting remedies. He does recommend some steps including a broad one that the minorities and the poor be given a stronger voice in their own futures. He does urge a more coordinated, more general approach in attacking the problems of poverty and discrimination. He does advocates also a stronger, more humane leadership and a more concerned, more enlightened public.

What is really needed is a basic change in American thinking about its poor and its minorities, he asserts. Then, with that adjustment made, perhaps we will be ready to work out the specifics of the programs that will prevent the future Wattses, Newarks, Detroits.

Books such as Jacobs' provide at least a nudge in that direction, providing, of course, that enough of the right people read them.



SAN FRANCISCO writer Paul Jacobs, author of "Prelude to Riot: A View of Urban America From the Bottom," is a staff consultant for the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions.

THE HEALING SECRETS OF THE AGES by Catherine Ponder; Parker, 212 pages, $6.95.

IF THE latest book by one of its best-known ministers represents basic dogma, then the Unity faith which commands a considerable following in some sections of the country constitutes an amalgamation of fundamentalist religious precepts such as faith healing and a literal interpretation of the Bible with positive thinking concepts, the theories of psychosomatic medicine and the practice of incantations.

We refer to Catherine Ponder's "The Healing Secrets of the Ages."

The author's "healing secret" is that man's physical, mental and spiritual well-being is controlled inwardly from 12 "power centers" closely related to the glands.

By concentrating upon the proper use of those nerve centers, she contends, man can maintain good health and emotional balance.

Professional medicine will wince or scoff at the role Mrs. Ponder would assign to it. The physician would be called in only if the patient has failed to use his own healing powers properly and thus effectively. Medicine, she argues, treats only symptoms, not the causes of our ailments.

The doctors, quite understandably, will differ too from Mrs. Ponder in her diagnoses in the many case histories she presents — for instance, the woman whose swollen feet were attributed to an illicit love affair. And many will balk at suggestions such as the one that they deliver "pep one that they deliver "pep talks" to their livers or other organs when they act up.

"It's all in the head" is becoming an increasingly prevalent explanation of our maladies, both individual and social. Mrs. Ponder accepts that suggestion quite literally and prescribes accordingly.

The book represents a revealing and interesting example of the kind of metaphysical program that has acquired a huge and growing following. Mrs. Ponder and her church have simply carried the Norman Vincent Peale approach to life several steps farther, yet further emphasizing faith and de-emphasizing science.

New Books For Junior Readers

The physical sciences have made such tremendous strides in the last few years that the high school and college chemistry and physics of the parent generation are hopelessly outdated.

The new generation, however, seems to be producing an adequate number of youngsters willing to and capable of meeting the immense challenge of these complicated and expanding fields.

"Secrets of the Nucleus" (McGraw-Hill, $2.95) is a book to help them along the way to understanding of the fundamentals of nuclear physics, "glamor" field of today's sciences.

Part of the National Science Teachers Association sponsored "Vistas of Science" series that has been well received, it offers an explanation of atomic age science by college physics professor Joseph S. Levinger, who was a Manhattan Project participant. Another educator, George L. Carr, outlines a number of activities or experiments to demonstrate the principles advanced by Levinger.

The young reader will need some basic knowledge of physics and mathematics along with a keen interest in the field. With those, he will be ready to enjoy and benefit from this well-planned explanation of a fascinating field.

Some other new books for juniors:

Recently reviewed on this page was William Manners' "1, 2, 3 Go," a physical fitness book for boys 10 and older. "Hop, Run, Jump" (John Day, $3.75) by Rosa Demeter offers the same kind of incentive for still younger children, 4 and older, both boys and girls. The author is a Swiss gymnastics teacher and her book has been translated from the original German. As incentive for the youngsters to tackle the 130 exercises, the movements are related to those of animals and objects familiar to children. They make use of exercise aids readily available to boys and girls.

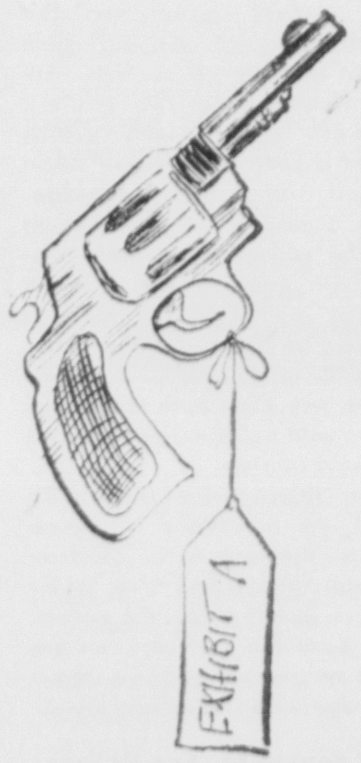
One of the great writers of our time, Isaac Bashevis Singer, shows that he is as adept at writing for juveniles as for adults in "The Fearsome Inn" (Scribner's, $4.50). For 10 to 12-year-olds, it is a story of witchcraft and enchantment, as practiced in an inn upon unsuspecting wayfarers. Illustrations are by Nonny Nogrogian. Probably not for the more impressionable youngsters. But for those who are up to this kind of thing, the work is as first-rate as one would expect from its origin.

The history and the concepts of navigation from the simplest observation of the first sailors to today's use of satellites are explored by Jack Coggins in his "By Star and Compass" (Dodd, Mead, $3.50). Youngsters with mathematical inclinations will find the explanation of the "shooting" of the sun particularly interesting. Coggins is a longtime sailing enthusiast. But another facet of his talents, an artist specializing in seascapes and ships, also stands him in special stead in this superior book.

Old-fashioned Fourth of July patriotism is the keynote of "This Nation" (World, $4.95) assembled by Dorothy Carrico Wood. It is a collection of speeches, songs, documents and poetry ranging from the Declaration of Independence to a number of short quotes from John F. Kennedy on Americanism and its meaning. We don't know how many youngsters will really read and appreciate this kind of thing, but it wouldn't hurt to place it in their hands and hope. It does seem, however, that Mrs. Wood could have been a bit less bound by convention and tradition in making her choices.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE CANDID IMPOSTER by George Harmon Coxe; Alfred A. Knopf, 117 pages, $4.50. Reviewed by Donald G. Davis.



When a New York newspaperman, out of work because of a strike, agrees to go to Panama, posing as a friend in order to collect a $10,000 debt, there's promise of something exciting.

When the newspaperman, Gary Manning, agrees to whisk something through customs for a shady character, there's an element of plot-thickening. And when a pretty girl makes the scene there's the scent of romance.

With all this going for him, author Coxe settles down to a perfectly competent plot, adept characterization and a whiff of mystery. Why then, is "The Candid Imposter" rather dull?

Well, it is sort of a walk-through, with the excitement muffled with tedious forays into who's wearing what, how's dinner ordered, and shall we drink?

Coxe is a prolific and much admired writer. Certainly he has done better than this. But perhaps his fans will disagree.

STEREO HI-FI

DO WE HAVE TO BUY STEREO RECORDS? Several months ago, the record manufacturers decided to process all of their new albums only in stereo. There would be one suggested price and only the stereo version available. This means that people with monaural phono systems would have to play stereo records on their sets.

WILL THE SOUND BE RIGHT? Yes. A stereo record can be played on a mono system and the music will sound very good; however, there would be no stereo or dimensional effect. The stylus (needle) in a mono phono system was designed in conjunction with its cartridge to wiggle only sideways and not up and down. In other words, the stylus is compliant (wiggly) in a horizontal direction and very stiff in a vertical direction. Stereo records have grooves that change sideways and also up and down to correspond to the respective music changes. Mono records have grooves that change only in a sideways direction to correspond to the respective music changes. Since a Mono stylus is stiff in the vertical direction it will tend to damage the vertical grooves of the stereo record. This damage will increase with number of playings. Actually, this damage will not affect the sound that is heard from the mono phono system, since the stylus and cartridge are not sensitive to vertical movements.

THE PROBLEM IN PLAYING STEREO RECORDS WITH A MONO STYLUS is that if you replace your mono system with a stereo phono unit, your stereo records that have been played on the mono unit will not be very good. The vertical groove damage that didn't show up on your mono system will now add distortion when played on a stereo system.

A stereo system has the capabilities of playing both mono and stereo records with no damage to the record grooves. In fact mono records sound crisper and cleaner when played with a stereo cartridge.

In summary, stereo records can be played on a mono system with good results. If these records are never intended to be used on a stereo system later, there is no problem. A stereo system can play both mono and stereo with no damage to record or sound quality.

For those who intend to build up a library of stereo records that are to be used on a mono system and later to be used on a stereo unit, the answer is to have the cartridge on the mono system changed to a stereo cartridge with a diamond stylus

DICK DAVY — "Stronger Than Dirt" — Columbia CS 9537:

There seems to be an abundance of humor and comedy on recordings of late, but most of the offerings are the sort of thing that, while perhaps funny on first hearing, would never provoke a second hearing. This new release is an exception.

Davy has been described as "a Negro Will Rogers," and his delivery does sometimes remind one of that great personality. But his material is just as up-to-date as you can get, and not the sort of up-to-date found in lesser comics who latch onto gags about mini skirts, the pill, etc.

Davy gets in some of the most trenchant comments on the prejudice-bigotry-riots situation yet heard cloaked in humor. Government is also another of his targets, as it was Roger's.

The listener will be shocked no end if he expects a mild Bill Cosby type of humor. Davy might even better be described as "a Negro Lenny Bruce."

MORT SAHL — "Anyway . . . Onward" — Mercury SR 61112:

Well, old Mort's back and sounds just the same, except for a good deal of time spent on his current hang-up—the Jim Garrison investigation. Mort's description of his big visit to the White House is great. It is climaxed by the great moment for which everyone awaits — the appearance of Walter Lippmann.

"SCORE THREE POINTS" — The Official Robin-Doud National Political Survey Test — Capitol ST 2629:

These are the people associated with the famous "First Family" album. This time they bombed.

The format is one of reading test questions off to the audience, many illustrated with actual recordings of voices of various political leaders and sound effects. Unfunny.

KEN NORDINE — "Color" — Philips PHM 200-224:

Another old favorite is back with his first LP in a long, long time.

Ken Nordine has a voice that must be heard to be believed. He sounds like he is right inside your mind, and his mental meanderings are instantly and mysteriously compelling.

This LP was born in a series of radio commercials for a paint company. Nordine has enlarged this to a series of 24 sketches, each only 90 seconds in length,

MORT SAHL
A White House visit

with various instrumental backgrounds. And each is devoted to a different color or shade.

But this is impossible to describe — listen to the album, preferably with the lights out, and let your imagination take flight!

FLIP WILSON — "Cowboys & Colored People" — Atlantic SD 8149:

This new Negro comic follows a similar bent to Bill Cosby with stories about children, or his versions of historical happenings. However, he is much closer to Negro culture and vocabulary in his delivery.

His version of the discovery of America is a very funny bit, as is the shaggy-dog story about his father in vaudeville.

THE ZODIAC — COSMIC SOUNDS — Music by Mort Garson; Words by Jacques Wilson — Elektra EKS 74009:

This disc is no more humor than Ken Nordine's, but we place it in this general area because it is difficult to classify. The 12 signs of the Zodiac are presented in turn in a sort of poetry and jazz format, with "science-fictionish" electronic manipulation of the sound. The LP instructs that it must be listened to in the dark.

When the listener is in the proper mood, and it would be inappropriate for me to suggest here how to reach that mood, the effect can be quite a trip.

THE SWINGLE SINGERS "Rococco A' Go Go"—Philips PHS 600-214:

The Swingle Singers' latest treats the melodies of Telemann, Couperin, Muffat, Daquin, Marcello and Quantz to a rollicking vocal treatment in their usual wordless style. The music of Telemann seems to work best.

Ward Swingle's group suffers from the usual intonation problems, but this is still an enjoyable encore to their previous four efforts. Very muffled and dull sound reproduction, though.

TREE BURNING – JAN. 6

The lights go gray
For the last time.

The globes are packed away
Orange-gold-green-blue-red and silver,

Seasonal fruits, stars and goodwill.
The light strings resist order

As in boxes we cram them
Impatiently now the season is over.

And the tree will be dragged to the pyre
Sacrificed to time like the Corn King

(Or Jesus)—
Only the dry needles remain
Fragrant of destruction

In the room suddenly large again
And strangely bare . . .

CHERISH ME

Come unto me and hear men when I say:
Serve me and cherish me,
And love me in such a way
That would make the sun shine brighter,
Give a drowning soul a will,
Make a frozen flower blossom,
Make the tides of time stand still.

SAN RAFAEL — DONNA SWAIN

THESE THREE roses have been honored as the 1968 All America Selections. At top is the pink hybrid tea, Miss All American Beauty, which is expected to prove itself one of the finest roses of all time. In center photo is the Europeana, a red floribunda. And in the bottom picture is the red grandiflora, the Scarlet Knight.

It's Bareroot Planting Time In Marin County

Garden Page

Winter brings with it the dormant plant planting season in Marin.

This fact means more to the novice gardener once he understands two things: First, some of our favorite shrubs and trees are best planted during their dormancy when they can be safely planted bareroot, and secondly these same shrubs and trees are usually less expensive in bareroot or balled and wrapped in burlap.

ROSES LEAD the parade of favorites available in bareroot form and leading the rose parade this year are three winners of the coveted All America Rose Selections award. (See story elsewhere on this page.)

Roses, however, are by no means the only popular flowering shrubs best planted during their dormancy. Flowering quince, weigela, golden bells, lilac, mock orange and a variety of deciduous magnolias are also best planted in winter.

Among the vines, wisteria and most clematis should also go in.

NOR ARE shrubs the only plants available in bareroot form. Deciduous flowering trees such as flowering cherries and plum, crabapples, flowering peaches and dogwood will all be found in nurserymen's show yards now. So will shade trees such as maples and locusts, sweet gum and birches, to name but a few.

In the home orchard, practically all fruit trees are best planted as young bareroot whips — peaches, apples, nectarines, plums, pears and cherries. Likewise almonds and walnuts.

For enthusiasts, grapes and berries are also available.

WHEN PLANTING a bareroot shrub or tree, spread the roots over a cone of soil in the planting hole and gradually fill in with loose topsoil, packing it firmly with your foot when the hole is filled.

Many of the young bareroot plants will need some pruning at planting time. Ask your nurseryman to show you how and how much to prune.

The Rush Is Under Way For The '68 All-America Selection Roses

It's easy to get carried away when it comes to talking up the All America Rose Selections each year.

Yet, for the 1968 selections, it seems easier than ever. Rarely have three more beautiful roses been offered to a public that dearly loves something new.

The accent is on Europe this year, with two of the three selections having been hybridized in France by House of Meilland, the third by G. deRiuter.

And there's something to please everyone, too: A lovely red floribunda, a classic pink hybrid tea and a scarlet grandiflora rose.

IN ORDER OF their probable popularity we find first the vibrant pink Miss All American Beauty, described by the All America Rose Selections people as "probably one of the greatest roses ever to be offered to the public."

That's a mighty tall claim, but nurserymen seem willing to acknowledge it.

Miss All American Beauty is a rose in the classic sense — fully double, perfectly formed and fragrant. Its color is a glistening pink or a shade that's unlike anything to come along in years.

YOU CAN TAKE your pick of the other two, either of which might be ranked as first choice by partisans who have grown them.

The floribunda is named Europeana, an exceptionally prolific rose with shimmering red blossoms borne in clusters. It is winner of four gold medals in international competition, owing partly to the tremendous lasting power of its blooms when cut.

The grandiflora is named Scarlet Knight, a sturdy rose which holds its clustered blooms high on the plant without drooping. The color is a fine scarlet-red, and there is fragrance of a delicate and tantalizing nature to be found by the gardener who seeks it.

As with All America Rose Selections each year, they will be in relatively short supply. Wise gardeners will order now.

Trimmings For Your Garden

In the eyes of a dedicated gardener no garden bed is complete without an edging.

He would no more omit it than would a creative chef leave the trimmings off a cake.

Edgings need not be permanent. For an annual flower bed they can simply be low growing annuals such as sweet alyssum or violas. Yet many edgings and borders are permanent in the form of perennials such as pinks and primroses or in the form of low growing shrubs such as Dwarf Boxwood, which in turn can be clipped formally or left to grow informally.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓Plant all deciduous trees and shrubs this month. This includes the new roses, which are now in good supply.

✓Prune roses during the next few weeks. Ask your nurseryman for advice if you're new at the game.

✓Plant perennials. Seedlings of the various perennial favorites are still available in nurseries.

✓Shop for Camellias. Some are in bloom now, and others will be in the next few weeks. There is no better time to select them.

✓Now is the time for your dormant winter spraying program, to get the jump on bugs and disease that will show up otherwise next spring.

THREE TABLES IN SPACE FOR ONE

AT FIRST glance, this coffee table appears to be like others of comparable design. A close look, however, reveals three tables nesting in space formerly occupied by one. This three-in-one, build-it-yourself piece of furniture has many uses. The slide-out tables permit extending the four-foot mother table to almost eight feet in length, or the smaller tables may be used independently. Simple in design, it blends perfectly with other furnishings regardless of period. Step-by-step directions outlined in the Easi-Bild pattern simplify building. It provides a complete list of materials and explains where and when each is used. The full-size patterns indicate exact location whenever two parts are fastened together. The routed out design may be finished with decorator black while the balance of the table is stained. Before The Painting Comes The Patching

Here's How To Go About That Important Chore

Lucky indeed is the home owner who decides to paint one of the rooms in his house and does not have to do any plaster patching ahead of time.

Of course, he can skip the patching if he wishes. But, if there are any cracks, holes or openings of any kind in the plaster, neglecting them before painting will only result in an amateurish effect when the job is completed.

BETTER TO spend a little extra time in closing the gaps in the wall and be certain, at the very least, of winning the approbation of the lady of the house — or the man of the house, since women do so much interior painting these days.

Plaster patching material usually comes in the form of a powder which requires mixing with water before using. When mixed to the consistency of dough, it is applied with a putty knife or similar tool.

However, in the case of hairline cracks, the mixture should be a little more watery so that it can be pressed into the tiny openings.

WHILE PATCHING plaster dries fairly quickly, it does not dry as rapidly as plaster of paris, which also comes in powdery form. Some persons make a 50-50 mixture of the two and find it very effective.

Nothing or nobody can tell you as much about the proper drying time as the instructions on the container of whatever product you purchase.

Possibly the most important thing about patching is the necessity of wetting down the area to be repaired. Wet the opening thoroughly, then apply the plaster. After the patch has set, wet it down again.

THE PATCH must be covered with a sealer or primer before repainting the entire wall or trying to match the patch with the result of the surface.

When the opening in the plaster is anything more than a hairline crack, it must be undercut to prevent the patch from falling out when it has dried. Undercutting involves making the edges of the plaster slant inward, so that the opening is wider at the bottom than at the top. Be sure all loose bits of plaster are removed, then soak the opening with clear water and go ahead with the patching.

When a large gap must be filled, it is sometimes better to do it in two stages.

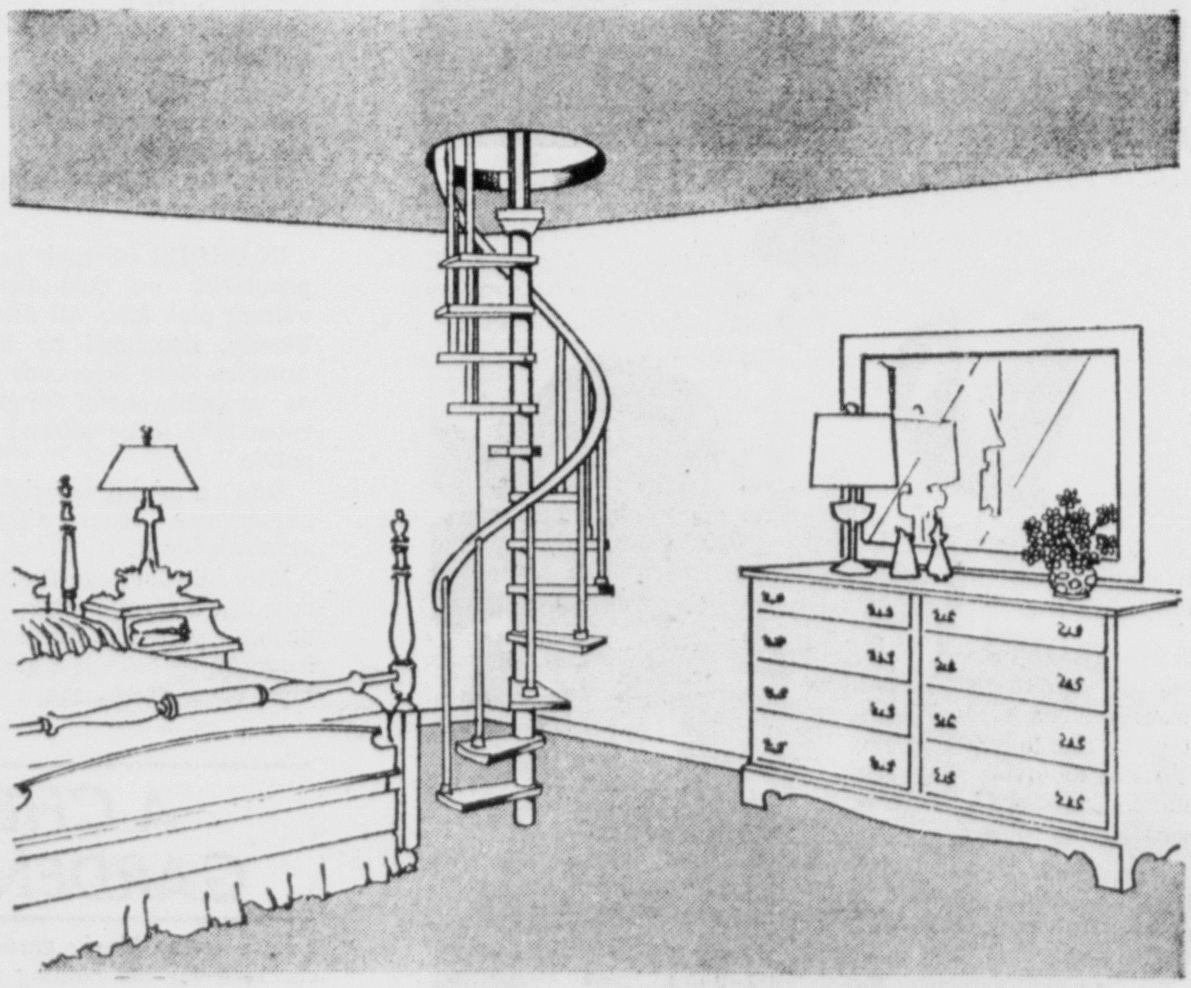
APPLY THE patching material so that it doesn't quite come to the surface. Let it set completely. Now apply more plaster, bringing it the tiniest fraction of an inch above the surface.

When it is dry, sand it even with the surface and wet it down. Later, apply the primer and, when that is dry, go ahead with the painting.

Yes, it'll take more time than if you went ahead and slapped on the paint. But it's well worth it.

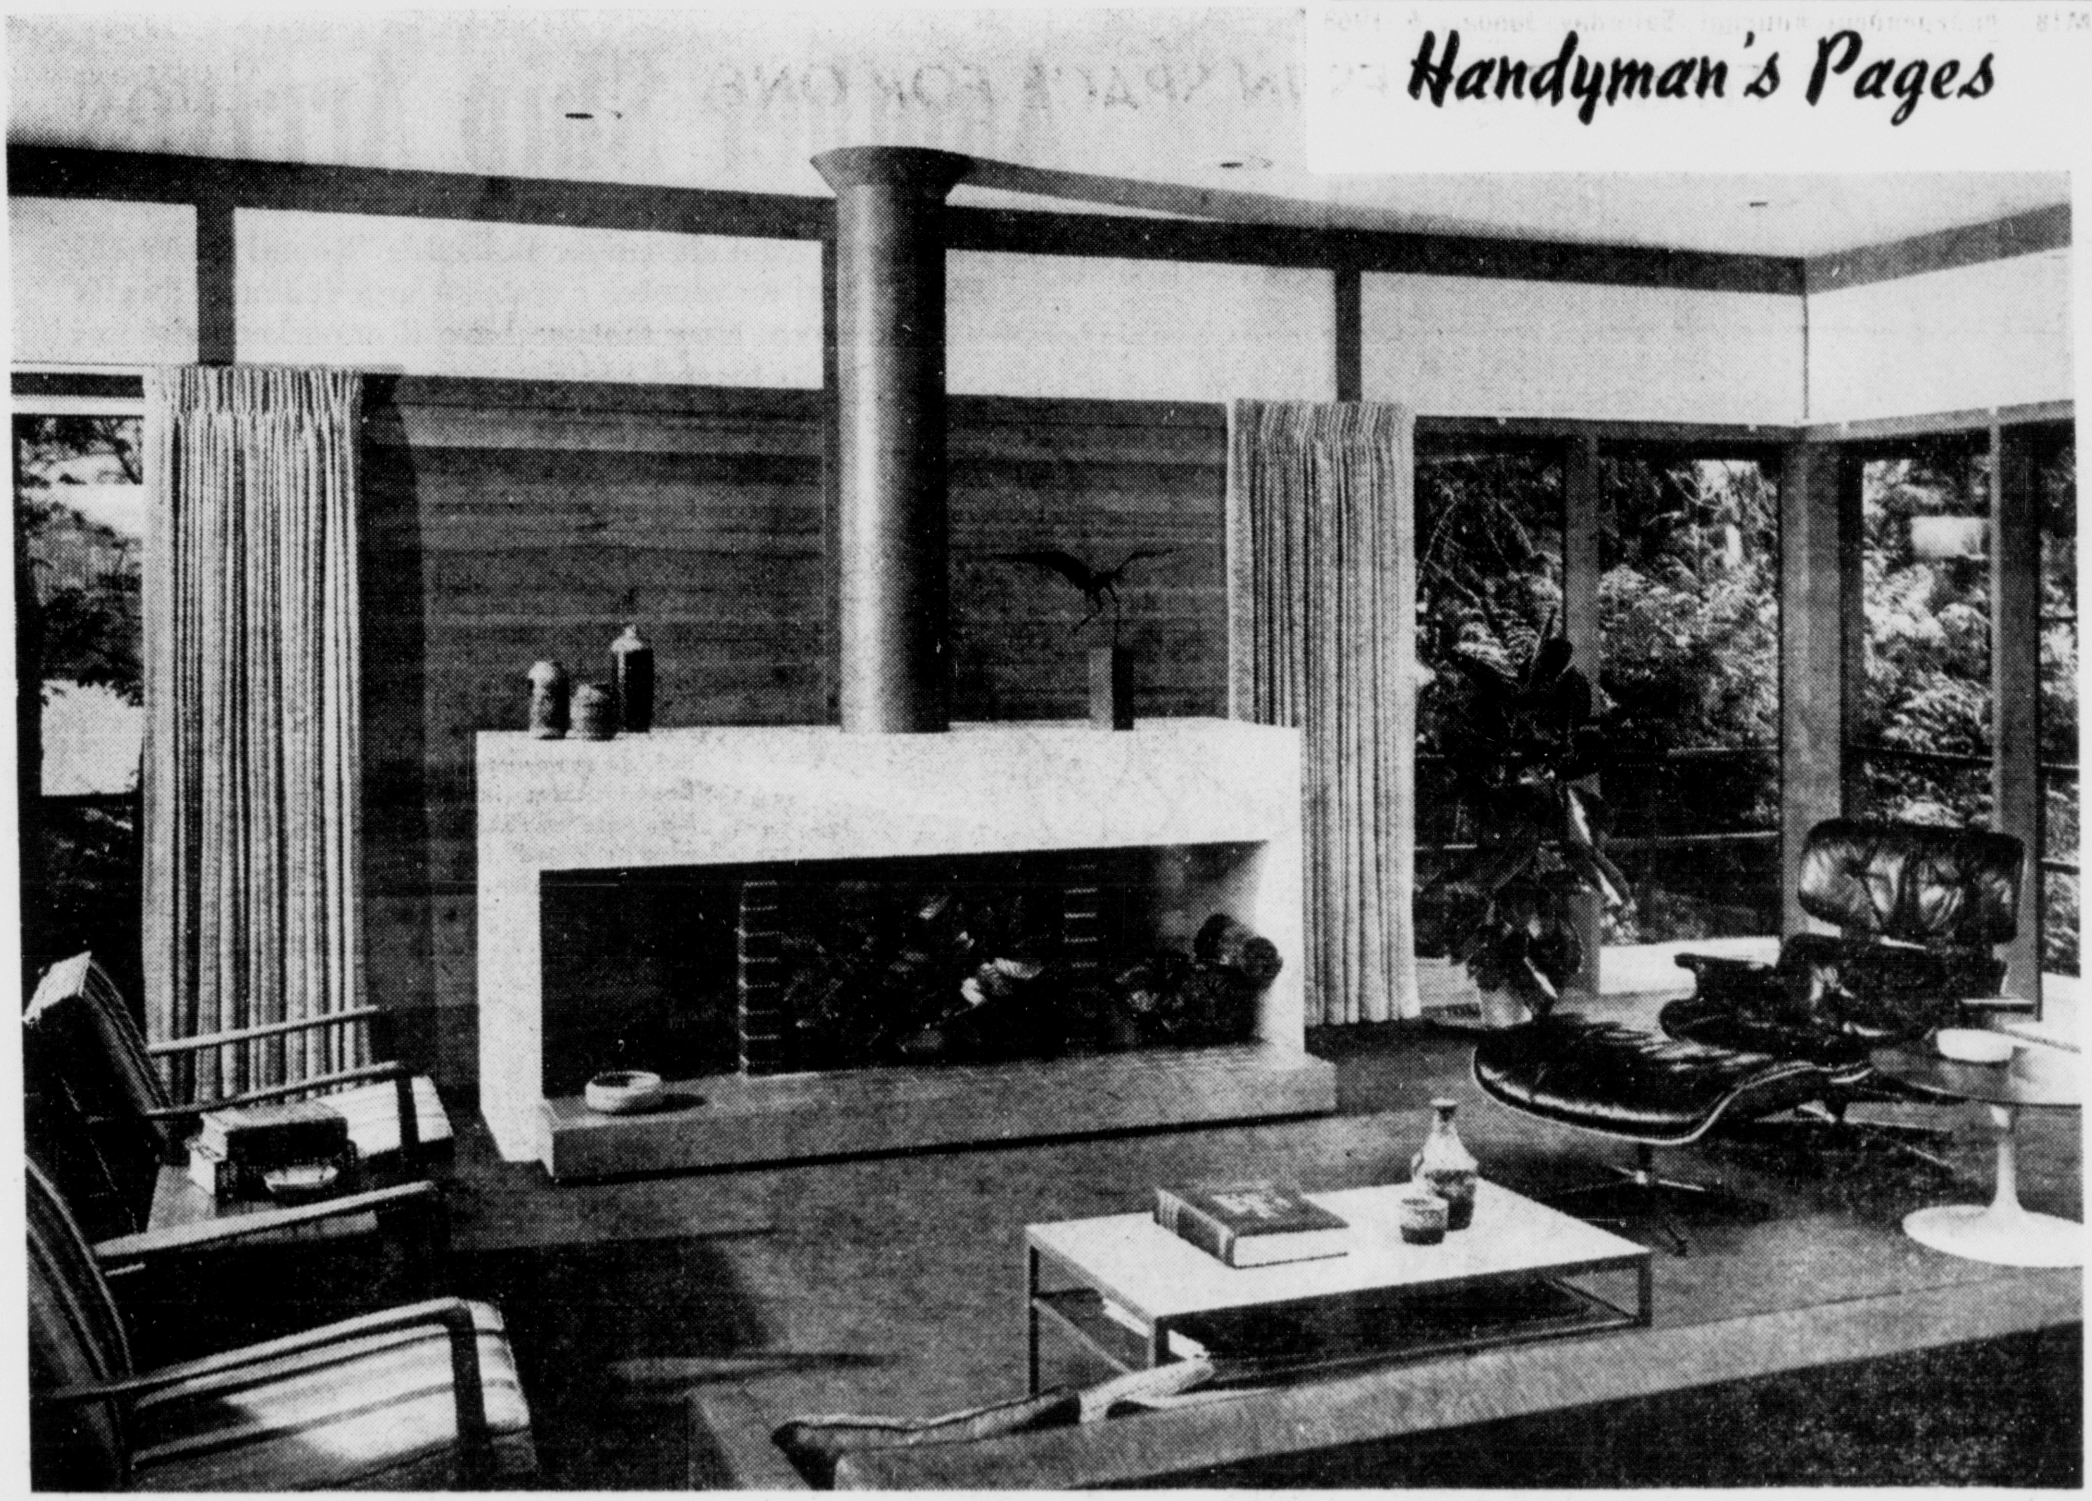
BRIGHT IDEAS

A Spiraling Staircase For Privacy



IF YOU ARE planning a new home or remodeling an old one, and a two-story plan is involved, or if you want to make greater use of your attic, here is a feature that offers the advantages of a duplex arrangement while utilizing only a minimum of valuable space. The spiral staircase permits you to move from bedroom to attic den, or to other accommodations overhead, with ease and privacy. These graceful, compact staircases are available in wood or iron, either prefabricated or custom built. Wood is slightly more expensive and less durable, but has the advantage of greater warmth. Ask your architect or your building supply dealer about them.

Handyman's Pages



THIS MODERN HEARTH has been given a dramatic appearance by the combination of plaster and brick in the fireplace enclosure, by the exposed metal chimney and by the tiled hearth itself. The wall behind is paneled with clear-finished western hemlock flooring laid horizontally, which adds textural contrast and enhances the warmth of the area. 'New Look' Hearth Retains Friendly Charm Of Fireplace

If asked to name the most important elements in a comfortable house, a majority of families would rank the hearth wall at or near the top of the list.

It seems that, no matter how humble it may be or what its style, a house needs a fireplace to really be a home.

Many families have discovered, however, that it's perfectly possible to break with traditional appearance without destroying the hearth wall's inherent warm friendliness.

FROM THAT discovery has sprung a wealth of exciting fireplace designs which, in turn, have given rise to a refreshingly new look in the living room. The feeling is more open, free and personal.

Usually the "new-look" fireplaces are set out from the wall rather than being recessed. Result: elimination of the usual wall trappings of moldings and built-ins, and a sense of unencumbered space.

Among the amazing variety of prefabricated fireplaces available today, there's something for everyone. But for those who still wish custom design, it's also possible to build a fascinating fireplace.

FOR HIS OWN home, one architect designed a firebox of red brick and set it on an ankle-high hearth of sealed, polished buff brick. Then, with wood framing, he built another box around the firebox to form sides and a finished top which is used much like a mantel.

Sides of the outer box stand two feet away from the firebox, making open niches where logs and kindling may be stacked. The outer box was then plastered and painted white.

Chimney for the fireplace is olive-painted metal, its color matching the shade used for decorative trim and accessories throughout the living room.

TO COMPLEMENT the long, box-like fireplace, the architect-owner had the wall immediately behind paneled with western hemlock boards, using a tongue-and-groove flooring grade. The straight-grained hemlock boards were laid horizontally and finished clear.

The wood's coloring is a golden beige, its straight graining giving a faintly striped effect to the wall.

The hemlock boards were then repeated as paneling on other wall surfaces in the room.

A PLEA FOR REALITY

The Cowboy Movie Has Hit Hard Times

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The western, a film staple ever since "The Great Train Robbery" in 1903, has struck one of its periodic slumps.

A glance at the production schedule discloses that not a single western is being filmed today, and few are planned for next year.

Where have they all gone? To television, and such illogical locations as Italy and Germany.

HERE'S ONE expert who sees hope for the future: Robert Kirsch, a film buff who happens to be book editor of the Los Angeles Times. He has also served in Hollywood, having been story consultant at Universal for the Chrysler Theater.

"There's nothing wrong with the western that a brand-new look at the medium wouldn't cure," observes Kirsch.

"Producers think they have exhausted the material, but that is only because they think in terms of the western myth. What they need to do is look beyond the myth to the reality of the West, and then the possibilities will be limitless.

"THAT'S EXACTLY what happened with 'Bonnie and Clyde."

"The gangland movie seemed to have been exhausted. But by taking a naturalistic approach to the material, 'Bonnie and Clyde' was exciting and new, far removed from anything like 'Scarface' or 'The Life and Death of Jack Legs Diamond.'

"The western needs periodic enrichment. Film makers need to develop a neo-western which can take a fresh and invigorating view of the West, as 'Bonnie and Clyde' did of gangsters. It should be done in the same manner, without any moralistic or didactic conclusions being drawn."

KIRSCH IS conversant with western lore, having recently published "West of the West," a collection of first-hand historical accounts of early California which he compiled with another Times staffer, William Murphy. The book is a gold mine of western lore, and Kirsch hopes producers will explore it for film subjects. (See review on Page M14.)

"It's all in public domain, so the material is available to anyone," he said. "I think film makers could find good material for the neo-western in California history, which has been too long neglected by films.

"Oh, there have been pictures that were supposed to portray early California. They made 'The Mark of Zorro,' but it bore little relationship to what happened here. Also 'Ramona,' but the real story of Ramona hasn't been told. Nor has that of John Sutter, a Swiss who tried to set up a feudal barony in California, only to have it ruined by the discovery of gold."

KIRSCH RATTLED off a number of potential subjects that have been virtually untouched: The vigilantes, the role of California in the Civil War, the California Indians, cattle wars, etc.

"Everything that has happened in California is a production of America," said Kirsch. "The gold rush was merely the Horatio Alger story played on a grand scale, with men seeking quick riches and adventure. Whatever America has had, California has known in greater degree — for better or worse."

IF WESTERN MOVIES are in a slump, the television western is still going strong. On one such series, "The Big Valley," Sandra Smith will become the bride of Richard Long in the episode to be shown Monday at 10 p.m. on Channels 7 and 11.
